Radio in Business.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

[The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune.]

THE "JAGGED" lightning, making "forks" in the sky is not jagged at all, Mr. Legg, Westinghouse engineer, shows with photographs 150 times faster than motion picture cameras, that the lightning bolt is a spiral. That interests those who know that the spiral is opposed to the circle, is the emblem of progress.

Our earth, accompanying the sun in its journey through space, travels a spiral path. The sun travels ahead toward the star Vega, we going around it, following it, taking a spiral course. You are many billions of miles from the spot in the universe where you were born, and probably never will go back.

JOHN DEMAREST died Thursday in the New Jersey house in which he was born 99 years ago. His wife, aged 96 took care of him to the last. They had been married 77 years.

On his diamond wedding day John Demarest told the world he never had anything to complain of. "We always worked hard, went to bed early, got up early, cooked our own meals, forgave each other's faults, and went to church."

And he died in the house in which he was born. How restless globe wanderers will envy that calm life.

FRANCE builds dozens of tiny airplanes, smallest in the world; every French submarine will carry one.

One of these submarine airplanes rose from the water nine seconds after the submarine reached the surface, went up 2,000 feet, descended and went aboard the submarine again.

A fleet of submarines coming up near a big city, discharging its swarm of mosquito-like airplanes, each carrying its gas or explosive bomb, could make the next war interesting.

MR. BROWNING, elderly gentleman attracting attention in connection with "Peaches," Cinderellas and similar objects, has a new plan. There is no use trying to make "Peaches" or Cinderelias happy, they nearly always sue on.

Mr. Browning will encourage others tring to do good. His wealth, no longer used for Cinderella fur coats, or "Peaches" automobiles, will create a "do good" foundation, a combination of the Nobel prize and Y. M. C. A. It ought to work.

Thus again sorrow and disappointment produce good works.

GENERAL MOTORS Export Co. connects its branches in South Africa by radio. Each night General Motors' headquarters at Montevideo talks to agents all over South America. That is business.

As related here, Standard Oil has purchased a flying office for the use of executives, and Mr. Judson, president of Continental Motors, visits his three widely separated manufacturing plants in his flying machine in one day.

Business is more complicated than when Abraham Lincoln worked in a store.

THE GERMAN foreign office, tired of imitating Bismarck's "reptile press" methods, has sold its secretly owned Allgemeine Zeitung. A newspaper secretly owned and used for secret purposes may fool its owner, but does not fool the public. Some prosperous Americans have made that discovery.

RAIDING SQUAD SEIZES STILL, MASH, LIQUOR IN FARM VISIT

Sheriff Wright and Aides Search Unoccupied House.

WRECK EQUIPMENT

Authorities Say Lash Tucker May Face Another Charge.

As an aftermath of the arrest of Lash Tucker, Liverpool township resident, upon a charge of transporting liquor, Sheriff George Wright, accompanied by Deputy Lawrence Kindsvatter and Constable Clarence Wetzel, raided an unoccupied house on what is known as the Hays farm, two miles southeast of Lisbon, last night.

In the cellar of the house, the raiders seized a 50-gallon still, equipped with gas burners, gasoline tank and other accessories used in the manufacture of liquor; 14 barrels of mash, 250 pounds of sugar, one gallon of finished liquor, a .38 caliber Colt revolver, tools, lanterns and other equipment. The authorities also found in the house a Chicago mail order catalogue, addressed to Tucker, Sheriff Wright said.

A farm wagon was engaged and the still and other equipment removed to the county jail at Lisbon after the mash had been destroyed. County authorities said today that another charge of manufacturing liquor may be filed against Tucker as a result of the second raid.

Tucker is being held in the county jail for non-payment of a fine of $1,000 and costs assessed against him by Probate Judge Lodge Riddle yesterday afternoon upon a liquor charge. Tucker was arrested when his automobile became stalled in the mud as he was leaving a Lincoln Highway tourist camp, Thursday night, 14 gallons of liquor being found in his machine.

Before being taken before Judge Riddle, Tucker was arraigned before Justice M. K. Zimmerman on a charge of receiving stolen property in the connection with the theft of ware valued at $84.24 from the No. 2 plant of the Homer Laughlin China company last November. He pleaded not guilty to the charge and was held for a hearing next Monday. His bond has been fixed at $1,000.

Fighting at Shanghai.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 5.—Hard pressed by the ever advancing Cantonese but stubbornly contesting every foot of ground, General Sun Chuan-Fang, governor of Chekiang province, still was waging a determined battle today for continued control of Shanghai, and the coveted millions of revenue collected at China's chief seaport.

Although he was reported to have been defeated in the fight yesterday in the neighborhood of Yenchow, Sun continued to resist, and today was rushing up reinforcements to bolster his faltering lines.

The outcome of the battle is of great importance to the foreign residents of Shanghai, because with the defeat of Sun Chuan-Fang the prospect of serious fighting in the vicinity of the international settlement becomes imminent.

Sheriff Wright and Aides Search Unoccupied House.

WRECK EQUIPMENT

Authorities Say Lash Tucker May Face Another Charge.

As an aftermath of the arrest of Lash Tucker, Liverpool township resident, upon a charge of transporting liquor, Sheriff George Wright, accompanied by Deputy Lawrence Kindsvatter and Constable Clarence Wetzel, raided an unoccupied house on what is known as the Hays farm, two miles southeast of Lisbon, last night.

In the cellar of the house, the raiders seized a 50-gallon still, equipped with gas burners, gasoline tank and other accessories used in the manufacture of liquor; 14 barrels of mash, 250 pounds of sugar, one gallon of finished liquor, a .38 caliber Colt revolver, tools, lanterns and other equipment. The authorities also found in the house a Chicago mail order catalogue, addressed to Tucker, Sheriff Wright said.

A farm wagon was engaged and the still and other equipment removed to the county jail at Lisbon after the mash had been destroyed. County authorities said today that another charge of manufacturing liquor may be filed against Tucker as a result of the second raid.

Tucker is being held in the county jail for non-payment of a fine of $1,000 and costs assessed against him by Probate Judge Lodge Riddle yesterday afternoon upon a liquor charge. Tucker was arrested when his automobile became stalled in the mud as he was leaving a Lincoln Highway tourist camp, Thursday night, 14 gallons of liquor being found in his machine.

Before being taken before Judge Riddle, Tucker was arraigned before Justice M. K. He pleaded not guilty to the charge and was held for a hearing next Monday. His bond has been fixed at $1,000.

C. & P. VETERAN ON HONOR ROLL

Barnett Burlingame Retires After 43 Years Service.

Barnett Burlingham, veteran Cleveland & Pittsburgh division employe, was retired this week to the Pennsylvania Honor Roll after 43 years of railroad service.

At the age of 12, he took employment as a section hand on the Mahoning division of the old L. S. & M. S. R. R. The following year, Mr. Burlingham left home and located in Cleveland, where he worked in a stove factory operated by Roberts & Reed. He remained at those duties until 1877, at which time he took employment on the Erie Railroad as a brakeman, remaining there until 1884. About this time he sought employment with the Pennsylvania railroad and was hired by George Skinner, then general yardmaster at Cleveland Union Station.

Mr. Burlingham states he served 30 days (without pay) learning the road, and made his first day April 15, with Conductor J. Mumford, working from Cleveland to Wellsville, which took 36 hours. For this service he received the sum of $1.50, payment for overtime in those days being unknown.

Mr. Burlingham worked as a brakeman for eight months and was then made general yard clerk at Wellsville Shop, with Theodore Starrett, where he stayed six months, at which time he made request to go back on the road and was assigned as a passenger brakeman between Wellsville and Pittsburgh. Subsequently, he was promoted to conductor on December 8, 1886, making his first freight run between Wellsville and Cleveland, December 20, on what was known as No. 11, his first engineman being George Carson.

On December 1, 1900, Burlingham was promoted to passenger conductor, making his run on No. 11 between Pittsburgh and Cleveland in place of Charles Zimmerman. His first regular passenger run he obtained in 1905, taking the place of Thomas Kerr on the run known as "The Growler," and operating between Wellsville and Bellaire.

Burlingham came to Cleveland in 1907, taking a run operating between that point and Pittsburgh and made his last passenger run on January 6, 1925, from Pittsburgh to Cleveland on the same train on which he made his first run after being promoted to a passenger conductor.

Owing to defective eyesight, it was necessary for him to retire from active duty and today he enters the ranks of those faithful employes whose names appear on the Pennsylvania "Roll of Honor."

Mr. Burlingham states that in the 43 years of service he never missed a call or was never late for a run. He served but one suspension, for which he later was exonerated.

Twenty men in all got so much a case before the bootleg poison reached the consumer. No wonder it is expensive.

An inspection trip through the vast Seagraves plant where the fire trucks are built "from the ground up" was one of the features of their visit.

The mayor, the service director, Taylor and Hanlon were given an opportunity to inspect the truck before it went to the paint shop for the final touches and the entire party conceded it one of the finest trucks the city could purchase for the money.

The "priming" coat had already been applied to the machine which will be painted a maroon with the words, "Wellsville Fire Dept.," on the sides.

C. & P. VETERAN ON HONOR ROLL

Barnett Burlingame Retires After 43 Years Service.

Barnett Burlingham, veteran Cleveland & Pittsburgh division employe, was retired this week to the Pennsylvania Honor Roll after 43 years of railroad service.

At the age of 12, he took employment as a section hand on the Mahoning division of the old L. S. & M. S. R. R. The following year, Mr. Burlingham left home and located in Cleveland, where he worked in a stove factory operated by Roberts & Reed. He remained at those duties until 1877, at which time he took employment on the Erie Railroad as a brakeman, remaining there until 1884. About this time he sought employment with the Pennsylvania railroad and was hired by George Skinner, then general yardmaster at Cleveland Union Station.

Mr. Burlingham states he served 30 days (without pay) learning the road, and made his first day April 15, with Conductor J. Mumford, working from Cleveland to Wellsville, which took 36 hours. For this service he received the sum of $1.50, payment for overtime in those days being unknown.

Mr. Burlingham worked as a brakeman for eight months and was then made general yard clerk at Wellsville Shop, with Theodore Starrett, where he stayed six months, at which time he made request to go back on the road and was assigned as a passenger brakeman between Wellsville and Pittsburgh. Subsequently, he was promoted to conductor on December 8, 1886, making his first freight run between Wellsville and Cleveland, December 20, on what was known as No. 11, his first engineman being George Carson.

On December 1, 1900, Burlingham was promoted to passenger conductor, making his run on No. 11 between Pittsburgh and Cleveland in place of Charles Zimmerman. His first regular passenger run he obtained in 1905, taking the place of Thomas Kerr on the run known as "The Growler," and operating between Wellsville and Bellaire.

Burlingham came to Cleveland in 1907, taking a run operating between that point and Pittsburgh and made his last passenger run on January 6, 1925, from Pittsburgh to Cleveland on the same train on which he made his first run after being promoted to a passenger conductor.

Owing to defective eyesight, it was necessary for him to retire from active duty and today he enters the ranks of those faithful employes whose names appear on the Pennsylvania "Roll of Honor."

Mr. Burlingham states that in the 43 years of service he never missed a call or was never late for a run. He served but one suspension, for which he later was exonerated.

BOOTLEGGERS complain that business is almost ruined by heavy expenses. Testimony sworn, in New Jersey, shows that to land one bootleg cargo it was necessary to bribe the mayor, chief of police, two detectives, a police sergeant from another city, customs inspector and dock owner.

Twenty men in all got so much a case before the bootleg poison reached the consumer. No wonder it is expensive.

CHAPTER 32.

"So," he said, "Alexis has found his way here. We have been looking for him," and, bending over the writhing man, he applied the stethoscope to his heart and lungs.

Then he turned to me.

"You have been privileged to witness," he said in French, "a most interesting phenomenon."

"Pardon me," I interrupted, "but is this part of your duties as a butler?"

"I am not a butler," he replied, drawing himself up, a flush of humiliation staining his broad cheeks. "I am Doctor Kuntz. "I only act as a butler in deference to the wishes of the Center."

"Is this unhappy creature one of your patients?" I inquired.

"He is," replied Doctor Kuntz, "and you have been privileged to witness a person under the influence of repeated doses of cocaine, a cocaine-maniac, in fact, near the final stage."

"You will see the others presently," he continued, looking at me with a malevolent smile. "In fact, you will get to know them quite well in the course of the next few days. Meanwhile, I will have Alexis removed. Please note that you are free to go about as you please in this wing of the house, and downstairs you will find a sitting room and a dining room. I do not think it will be necessary to introduce you to any of your fellow guests. Their names are of little consequence, and you will find that they are prepared to dispense with the formality of an introduction."

He turned and left the room, and a few moments later two Japanese attendants entered, bearing a stretcher. They lifted Alexis, who had relapsed again into a state of coma, and laid him without ceremony upon it. One of them turned to me and said:

"Breakfast is in large room downstairs. First turn to right."

When they had gone I made shift to dress. I noted with satisfaction that I had been provided with shaving materials, and with these I removed a three days' growth of beard on my lips and chin, trying as best I could to keep my mind from dwelling on the horrors which I had just witnessed.

In about ten minutes I left my bedroom and, following the directions of the servant I soon found myself downstairs and in a fair-sized room, white like the rest of the house, and very plainly furnished, with a marble-topped table and several hard chairs. On the table was a pot of coffee, a roll of bread and several cups. I poured out a cup of cofee, but on tasting it found it was cold.

I looked in vain for a means of acquainting the servants with this fact, but seeing none, was obliged to make shift with what I found. There was a strange, close smell in the room, due to the fact that the windows had not been open for some considerable time, as I soon proved, for they resisted all my efforts to unlatch them.

Having made my meal, I resolved to continue my explorations. Opening out of the dining room was a salon or living room. I pushed open the door and entered.

There were some dozen to twenty persons present. Some were chattering freely as I arrived, but they ceased talking the moment they caught sight of me and looked at me with suspicion. There were several men, but the women were in a majority. One of the men must have been fifty or possibly older. He had a sallow, lined face, covered with deep wrinkles. Another was a mere lad, possessed of a hacking cough which shook his thin frame cruelly from time to time. His eyes shone brilliantly, and his general aspect was feverish in the extreme.

Of the women two were quite young, one well past her youth, and a fourth of middle age. They were none of them fully dressed, but wore soiled wraps or loose gowns. Two of them had not even troubled to do up their hair. The men were unshaven and they all had an air of slovenly disorder. Another thing they most of them had in common, except a couple, man and woman, who lay inertly upon a divan at the far end of the room: they were restless in their movements; none of them was still for a moment, but walked nervously to and fro, or had some physical twitch which they were quite unable to control.

My sudden entry produced, as I have said, something like a sensation, and the strange company, with the exception of the couple on the divan, turned with one accord and fixed me with surprised glances. I took a few steps forward and stopped short, regarding them more closely. Some of them refused to meet my eyes and shuffled their feet like small children detected in the commission of some trivial fault; I turned todays one of the women—the younger, a haggard blonde—she shrank up close to her neighbor, a middle-aged woman, who, to judge from the appearance of her raddled cheeks, had recently been weeping.

"Who is he, Mina?" she said hoarsely. "He is not one of us; he's a stranger."

There was a clamor of voices behind me, and turning I saw that a group of men who had for a moment ceased their conversation were again talking among themselves. One of them, a young man with long hair and a flowing tie, was expounding some system of philosophy which the others were vividly contesting. All were talking at once with an amazing rapidity and assurance.

I had little leisure, however, to observe them, or to catch the drift of their discourse, for I was suddenly aware of the woman, Mina, who had come towards men and was looking closely into my face with an expression of wry distaste.

"Why can't you leave us alone?" she said, in the same rustling whisper which I had noted before in Alexis. "This is no place for strangers."

I looked at her in compassion rather than disgust, appalled by her haunted eyes and a certain dreadful indecision that lurked in them even as she so insolently addressed me.

"Madam," I began, but at that instant the young girl, her companion, interposed rapidly between us.

"Mina," she rasped, "why are you talking to this man? I won't have it. Every one is false and hateful. I detest you all?"

And suddenly, without a word of warning, she struck me violently in the face.

I realized that all these people were under the same dreadful influence as the wretched Alexis and was prepared for almost any eccentricity, but this sudden and unprovoked assault took me by surprise. I drew back, but the girl, who had completely lost all control over herself, struck at me again, and I was obliged to seize her by the arm. She struggled violently to get free, and at this moment the young philosopher, closing his disquisition on seeing me thus disgaged, advanced swiftly towards us.

"Why are you assaulting this lady?" he cried, and in another instant he had sprung at my throat.

I struck the youth as light a blow as I could with the palm of my hand on his chest, which sent him staggering backwards some few feet where he crumpled to the floor. I hated doing it, for it was like striking a woman, but I could not bear to be mauled by these wretches. They were such wrecks of humanity that I felt at once desperately sorry for them, but full of irrepressible disgust.

This scene had been witnessed with complete indifference by the other persons in the room, except for a young girl who rushed forward and kneeling down, bent over the man whom I had been obliged to stretch on the floor.

"Rudolf," she cried, "you're hurt. He has killed you. How could he be so cruel."

He rose, however, and, pushing her callously aside, came towards me slowly, while the young woman, still on her knees, began to sob maddeningly, tonelessly, and without break. Expecting another attack I got ready to fend him off, but to my amazement he suddenly fell on his knees before me and looking up at me with an expression indescribably abject began to profess himself incoherently but with pitiable urgency as my servant and slave.

"See," he said, "everything I have is yours. There is nothing I will not give you. I will give you my treasure,' he said, "if only you will be kind to me."

"For heaven's sake, man," I said roughly, "get up and pull yourself together."

On this he suddenly scrambled to his feet and darted to a corner of the room, where he began pulling furtively at a loose board. With shaking fingers he succeeded after a moment in prying it up, and slipping his hand underneath, he withdrew a small scrap of dirty white paper with which he returned.

"See," he said, an expression of reverence coming into his eyes, "I have been saving it for weeks. It is my little white hag—the little one who whispers along my veins and gives me rest."

I do not think it will be necessary to introduce you to any of your fellow guests. Their names are of little consequence, and you will find that they are prepared to dispense with the formality of an introduction."

He turned and left the room, and a few moments later two Japanese attendants entered, bearing a stretcher. They lifted Alexis, who had relapsed again into a state of coma, and laid him without ceremony upon it. One of them turned to me and said:

"Breakfast is in large room downstairs. First turn to right."

When they had gone I made shift to dress. I noted with satisfaction that I had been provided with shaving materials, and with these I removed a three days' growth of beard on my lips and chin, trying as best I could to keep my mind from dwelling on the horrors which I had just witnessed.

In about ten minutes I left my bedroom and, following the directions of the servant I soon found myself downstairs and in a fair-sized room, white like the rest of the house, and very plainly furnished, with a marble-topped table and several hard chairs. On the table was a pot of coffee, a roll of bread and several cups. I poured out a cup of cofee, but on tasting it found it was cold.

I looked in vain for a means of acquainting the servants with this fact, but seeing none, was obliged to make shift with what I found. There was a strange, close smell in the room, due to the fact that the windows had not been open for some considerable time, as I soon proved, for they resisted all my efforts to unlatch them.

Having made my meal, I resolved to continue my explorations. Opening out of the dining room was a salon or living room. I pushed open the door and entered.

There were some dozen to twenty persons present. Some were chattering freely as I arrived, but they ceased talking the moment they caught sight of me and looked at me with suspicion. There were several men, but the women were in a majority. One of the men must have been fifty or possibly older. He had a sallow, lined face, covered with deep wrinkles. Another was a mere lad, possessed of a hacking cough which shook his thin frame cruelly from time to time. His eyes shone brilliantly, and his general aspect was feverish in the extreme.

Of the women two were quite young, one well past her youth, and a fourth of middle age. They were none of them fully dressed, but wore soiled wraps or loose gowns. Two of them had not even troubled to do up their hair. The men were unshaven and they all had an air of slovenly disorder. Another thing they most of them had in common, except a couple, man and woman, who lay inertly upon a divan at the far end of the room: they were restless in their movements; none of them was still for a moment, but walked nervously to and fro, or had some physical twitch which they were quite unable to control.

My sudden entry produced, as I have said, something like a sensation, and the strange company, with the exception of the couple on the divan, turned with one accord and fixed me with surprised glances. I took a few steps forward and stopped short, regarding them more closely. Some of them refused to meet my eyes and shuffled their feet like small children detected in the commission of some trivial fault; I turned todays one of the women—the younger, a haggard blonde—she shrank up close to her neighbor, a middle-aged woman, who, to judge from the appearance of her raddled cheeks, had recently been weeping.

"Who is he, Mina?" she said hoarsely. "He is not one of us; he's a stranger."

There was a clamor of voices behind me, and turning I saw that a group of men who had for a moment ceased their conversation were again talking among themselves. One of them, a young man with long hair and a flowing tie, was expounding some system of philosophy which the others were vividly contesting. All were talking at once with an amazing rapidity and assurance.

I had little leisure, however, to observe them, or to catch the drift of their discourse, for I was suddenly aware of the woman, Mina, who had come towards men and was looking closely into my face with an expression of wry distaste.

"Why can't you leave us alone?" she said, in the same rustling whisper which I had noted before in Alexis. "This is no place for strangers."

I looked at her in compassion rather than disgust, appalled by her haunted eyes and a certain dreadful indecision that lurked in them even as she so insolently addressed me.

"Madam," I began, but at that instant the young girl, her companion, interposed rapidly between us.

"Mina," she rasped, "why are you talking to this man? I won't have it. Every one is false and hateful. I detest you all?"

And suddenly, without a word of warning, she struck me violently in the face.

I realized that all these people were under the same dreadful influence as the wretched Alexis and was prepared for almost any eccentricity, but this sudden and unprovoked assault took me by surprise. I drew back, but the girl, who had completely lost all control over herself, struck at me again, and I was obliged to seize her by the arm. She struggled violently to get free, and at this moment the young philosopher, closing his disquisition on seeing me thus disgaged, advanced swiftly towards us.

"Why are you assaulting this lady?" he cried, and in another instant he had sprung at my throat.

I struck the youth as light a blow as I could with the palm of my hand on his chest, which sent him staggering backwards some few feet where he crumpled to the floor. I hated doing it, for it was like striking a woman, but I could not bear to be mauled by these wretches. They were such wrecks of humanity that I felt at once desperately sorry for them, but full of irrepressible disgust.

This scene had been witnessed with complete indifference by the other persons in the room, except for a young girl who rushed forward and kneeling down, bent over the man whom I had been obliged to stretch on the floor.

"Rudolf," she cried, "you're hurt. He has killed you. How could he be so cruel."

He rose, however, and, pushing her callously aside, came towards me slowly, while the young woman, still on her knees, began to sob maddeningly, tonelessly, and without break. Expecting another attack I got ready to fend him off, but to my amazement he suddenly fell on his knees before me and looking up at me with an expression indescribably abject began to profess himself incoherently but with pitiable urgency as my servant and slave.

"See," he said, "everything I have is yours. There is nothing I will not give you. I will give you my treasure,' he said, "if only you will be kind to me."

"For heaven's sake, man," I said roughly, "get up and pull yourself together."

On this he suddenly scrambled to his feet and darted to a corner of the room, where he began pulling furtively at a loose board. With shaking fingers he succeeded after a moment in prying it up, and slipping his hand underneath, he withdrew a small scrap of dirty white paper with which he returned.

"See," he said, an expression of reverence coming into his eyes, "I have been saving it for weeks. It is my little white hag—the little one who whispers along my veins and gives me rest."

EAST LIVERPOOL—AMERICA'S POTTERY CENTER

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1927.

Building Boom For East Liverpool

East Liverpool district will witness an extensive building program this spring, judging from announcement made yesterday of plans for an industrial plant and two gasoline filling stations, not to mention prospective homes. Probably one million dollars will be invested in the various projects.

The Patterson Foundry and Machine company will build a modern factory and office building on the Martin tract in East End, while the Fisher Oil and Gas company and James Brown, owner of the B. & W. Tire company, will erect gasoline stations on Broadway-Fifth street and Dresden avenue sites.

In addition the Homer Laughlin China company is considering the construction of another pottery plant in Newell.

And the building boom is not confined to the East Liverpool district. Chicago, according to press dispatches, will spend a half billion dollars in five years. St. Louis runs it a close second with a program which, when the size of the city is considered, is almost as pretentious.

During these same five years St. Louis expects to complete public improvements aggregating about $80,000,000. They include a $6,000,000 memorial plaza, a $12,000,000 waterworks, a $5,000,000 auditorium, a $4,000,000 courthouse, an $8,000,000 street lighting system and a $16,000,000 sewer plan, with large additional sums allowed for better fire equipment, new parks and playgrounds, elimination of grade crossings and other purposes of utility and beauty.

Many other American cities are pursuing the same liberal policy. There is hardly a community of any size that is not planning some notable structure or improvement.

Talk about a lull in the building boom! As the scramble for new homes and hotels and private business structures begins to ease a little, municipalities everywhere get into the game with public building plans. We seem, in our American cities, to be entering an age of public building rivalling the age of Pericles in Athens. Noble and beautiful structures are arising on all sides. Architecture is flourishing in the United States more than anywhere else in the world.

Leave any prosperous American city for 20 years, and you will not know it when you return; but you will surely admire it for its fine city hall and courthouse, its postoffice building, its churches and business structures and memorials and apartment houses, and its pleasant parks and spacious, dignified square and thoroughfares.

Panama And Nicaragua

The American public seems to be losing interest in Nicaragua, feeling that while the situation there is not altogether satisfactory, it will probably work out all right. And perhaps it will, sooner or later. But there are curious complications with other Latin-American countries.

Panama is the most striking example, since Mexico began to disappear from the Nicaragua scene.

Newspaper readers may remember reading, a few weeks ago, about a treaty negotiated between the United States and Panama, and submitted by the president of Panama to the national assembly for approval. It was a treaty which bound the United States and Panama more closely together, correcting some conditions unsatisfactory to Panama and incidentally assuring this country of more complete control over the Panama Canal, with thoroughgoing cooperation on the part of Panama in case it ever became necessary to defend the canal against foreign attack.

The Panama government and public were friendly to the treaty. Then came the landing of American marines in Nicaragua, and all the resulting developments that attracted the attention of the world to that country. Immediately opposition was shown to the new treaty. There were public demonstrations against it and appeals to "safeguard Panama's sovereignty." Then, near the end of January, the Panama assembly by a vote of 39 out of 46 shelved the treaty.

Panama seems to have turned "anti-American." And thus it looks as if Uncle Sam's efforts to safeguard the canal rights in Nicaragua have, in a totally unexpected way, made canal rights less safe in Panama.

Stand-Pat Immigration

The action of the United States senate in voting unanimously to extend the present immigration restriction quotas for another year has been called a "Nordic triumph." It is not necessarily that.

The continuance of the present quotas instead of the new plan proposed does prevent a sharp reduction in the number of admissible Germans, Irish and Scandinavians, who are mostly blonds of the vaunted Nordic type. On the other hand, it prevents the doubling of the admissible number of British, North Irish and Russians, who are also mainly blonds and Nordics. Thus the "national origins" scheme, temporarily defeated, would not have made much difference in the relative proportion of Nordics, Alpines and Mediterraneans admitted, though it would make considerable difference to certain nationalities.

The senate vote is little more than a stand-pat victory actuated by a desire to avoid trouble by keeping the immigrant situation as it is.

There are big stakes in China—and big mistakes.

West Toonerville News Item— By Fontaine Fox

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Musical comedy producers must have the most understanding of wives. There is an easy camaraderie between the producer and the show girl that would wreck most homes on the divorce rocks.

It is not unusual for a producer to reach the fireside at night with a tiny crimson cupid's bow from red lips on his collar or strands of yellow or black hair on his shoulder. It is customary for girls in their enthusiasm to sit on his lap and give him a misplaced smack.

In reality it means nothing for the show girl as a rule looks upon the producer as a sort of fatherly soul to whom she may creep when tired of the buffeting. Strangely enough there are few jealous mates among wives of such producers.

There home lives, in most instances, are pleasant. But few of the wives ever go to their husband's office. It seems a part of their wifely duty to keep in the background. Likely as not they may find two or three perched on the husband's desk or patting his cheek.

"Stage kisses" in the show world are as lightly bestowed as a hand wave. And at rehearsals the ordinary conventions are taboo. The chorus, due to the gruelling grind, are usually rehearsed sans stockings and wearing scanty rompers.

At the all-night rehearsal, preceding a premiere, taut nerves often snap and it is then the producer must calm hysterical flare-ups. Not only among the chorus, but principals and even the director as well. I have seen directors actually tear their hair and swoon.

It is told one musical show producer had his wife sign a prenuptial agreement completely ignore powdered shoulders, dearie talk over the telephone and the like. "It is only in this way," the agreement read, "that our home will be kept peaceful and happy." The idea has clicked.

There are, a spy tells me, six men who are able to salvage a living from the old-time saloon bar with brass rail. They have them made into portable shape and when the call comes they trundle them to a "party." There is no law—that is up to the minute—against it, of course, and they will also furnish a barkeep with a spit curl and a diamond ring encircling the cravat if necessary. The host or hostess must furnish ingredients. Many of the perambulating bars are booked until late in the spring. The advantage, it is pointed out, is in saving the carpets, furniture, bric-a-brac, etc., by having a central filling station, as it were.

My Favorite Stories

By IRVIN S. COBB

PRACTICALLY NO REASON FOR IT.

There once was a clerk of the hotel in a small Maine town who had a unique way of keeping a diary. Each evening he wrote on the bottom lines of the page of the register for the current date a brief account of the principal daily doings in the community, usually coupled with a summary of his own personal reactions to them. Sometimes his phraseology was unusual but always it was amply descriptive.

A friend of mine was stopping at the the hotel, having gone up to Maine on a fishing trip. He fell into the habit of glancing through the back pages of the register, more from the enjoyment he got from the quaint language of the entries than because he was interested in bygone neighborhood history.

On succeeding pages of the book for a week of the early spring of the year previous, he found these progressive records of a local tragedy:

Tuesday: "While fishing through the ice yesterday, Henry Whippet fell in the Saco river up to his neck. He was drawed out and took home."

Wednesday: 'Henry Whippett is in bed with a powerful bad cold. His folks are thinking some about calling in a doctor."

Thursday: "Henry Whippet is rapidly continuing to get no better. It now looks like he is fixing to break out with the pneumonia."

Friday: "Henry Whippet is sinking rapidly."

Saturday: "At nine o'clock this morning our esteemed fellow-citizen, Henry Whippet, Esq., went to his Maker entirely uncalled for."

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

First Aid for Gas Victims.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—In a recent article on carbon monoxide poisoning the statement was made that in case of an accident of that nature the thing to do was to summon a physician at once and then make an effort to secure from the most readily available source one of the machines that are used to resuscitate persons overcome by gas or other poisonous fumes.

That there is something else to be done in the way of first aid that is exceedingly important is asserted by Alexander Forward, managing director of the American Gas association, and he ought to know what he is talking about since his organization created a committee on resuscitation from gas asphyxiation, composed of some of the most eminent authorities in the United States, and has given wide circulation to the recommendations of the experts. Mr. Forward and his company are interested because they control a large number of gas companies thorughout the country and it is a matter of great importance that every man identified with their organization should know what to do in such emergencies.

Dr. Cecil K. Drinker, associate professor of applied physiology of the Medical School of Harvard university, was the chairman of the committee that made an exhaustive study of the subject. His associates were Dr. Walter B. Cannon, professor of physiology of the same school; Dr. L. Edsall, the dean of that school; Dr. Howard W. Haggard and Dr. Yandell Henderson, both of Yale university and both consulting physiologists to the United States Bureau of Mines; Dr. Lawrence J. Henderson and Dr. Francis W. Peabody, both of the Harvard Medical school; Dr. Royd R. Sayers, chief surgeon of the United States Bureau of Mines and a surgeon of the Public Health service; and Charles B. Scott, of the Accident Prevention committee of the American Gas association.

The conclusions reached by a group of such recognized leaders of their profession are accepted without question by physicians everywhere. Laymen will do well to read and learn.

The Prone Pressure Method.

The report explains that the reason that automobile exhaust gas, the gases from coal heating furnaces, the smoke from fires, producer gas, coke oven gas, blast furnace gas, carbureted water gas, coal gas, and other manufactured gases are poisonous if actually breathed is that they all contain carbon monoxide. When carbon monoxide is breathed it combines with the blood and the victim becomes asphyxiated just as if he were being gradually choked to death. As low as one-tenth of one per cent of carbon monoxide, or even less, will kill a man in time; one per cent will kill in a few minutes.

When a man is overcome by gas, it is stated, the first thing to do is to get him into fresh air quickly. Fresh air does not mean out of doors in cold weather. Many men have walked from a warm room containing gas only to collapse in the cold air outside. Take the patient to a room free from gas and comfortably warm. Be quick, but don't be unnecessarily rough.

If the patient is not breathing or his breathing stops, start artificial respiration at once by the prone pressure method. And—here is the point that Mr. Forward stresses—don't wait for a physician or any apparatus or any one or anything else. Get to work with your own hands. A delay of even a minute may be fatal.

The prone pressure method—known as the Schafer method—is urged as the best method for artificial respiration—better than any method using a mechanical device. If the victim is breathing, an artificial respiration apparatus may injure him. If he is not breathing, he may die while you are getting the apparatus or getting ready to use it. It is the opinion of the committee that such apparatus has led to the deaths of more people than it has saved.

Now, here is how you go about prone pressure resuscitation: As soon as the victim is clear of the gas feel with your finger in his mouth and throat and remove any foreign body, such as chewing gum, tobacco, false teeth, and the like. Do not stop to loosen his clothing. Lay him on his tummy, one arm extended directly over his head, the other bent at the elbow and with face to one side, resting on the hand or forearm, so that the nose and mouth are free for breathing. Kneel straddling the patient with your knees just below his hip bones, and place the palms of your hands on the small of the back with

The action of the United States senate in voting unanimously to extend the present immigration restriction quotas for another year has been called a "Nordic triumph." It is not necessarily that.

The continuance of the present quotas instead of the new plan proposed does prevent a sharp reduction in the number of admissible Germans, Irish and Scandinavians, who are mostly blonds of the vaunted Nordic type. On the other hand, it prevents the doubling of the admissible number of British, North Irish and Russians, who are also mainly blonds and Nordics. Thus the "national origins" scheme, temporarily defeated, would not have made much difference in the relative proportion of Nordics, Alpines and Mediterraneans admitted, though it would make considerable difference to certain nationalities.

The senate vote is little more than a stand-pat victory actuated by a desire to avoid trouble by keeping the immigrant situation as it is.

There are big stakes in China—and big mistakes.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Musical comedy producers must have the most understanding of wives. There is an easy camaraderie between the producer and the show girl that would wreck most homes on the divorce rocks.

It is not unusual for a producer to reach the fireside at night with a tiny crimson cupid's bow from red lips on his collar or strands of yellow or black hair on his shoulder. It is customary for girls in their enthusiasm to sit on his lap and give him a misplaced smack.

In reality it means nothing for the show girl as a rule looks upon the producer as a sort of fatherly soul to whom she may creep when tired of the buffeting. Strangely enough there are few jealous mates among wives of such producers.

There home lives, in most instances, are pleasant. But few of the wives ever go to their husband's office. It seems a part of their wifely duty to keep in the background. Likely as not they may find two or three perched on the husband's desk or patting his cheek.

"Stage kisses" in the show world are as lightly bestowed as a hand wave. And at rehearsals the ordinary conventions are taboo. The chorus, due to the gruelling grind, are usually rehearsed sans stockings and wearing scanty rompers.

At the all-night rehearsal, preceding a premiere, taut nerves often snap and it is then the producer must calm hysterical flare-ups. Not only among the chorus, but principals and even the director as well. I have seen directors actually tear their hair and swoon.

It is told one musical show producer had his wife sign a prenuptial agreement completely ignore powdered shoulders, dearie talk over the telephone and the like. "It is only in this way," the agreement read, "that our home will be kept peaceful and happy." The idea has clicked.

There are, a spy tells me, six men who are able to salvage a living from the old-time saloon bar with brass rail. They have them made into portable shape and when the call comes they trundle them to a "party." There is no law—that is up to the minute—against it, of course, and they will also furnish a barkeep with a spit curl and a diamond ring encircling the cravat if necessary. The host or hostess must furnish ingredients. Many of the perambulating bars are booked until late in the spring. The advantage, it is pointed out, is in saving the carpets, furniture, bric-a-brac, etc., by having a central filling station, as it were.

My Favorite Stories

PRACTICALLY NO REASON FOR IT.

There once was a clerk of the hotel in a small Maine town who had a unique way of keeping a diary. Each evening he wrote on the bottom lines of the page of the register for the current date a brief account of the principal daily doings in the community, usually coupled with a summary of his own personal reactions to them. Sometimes his phraseology was unusual but always it was amply descriptive.

A friend of mine was stopping at the the hotel, having gone up to Maine on a fishing trip. He fell into the habit of glancing through the back pages of the register, more from the enjoyment he got from the quaint language of the entries than because he was interested in bygone neighborhood history.

On succeeding pages of the book for a week of the early spring of the year previous, he found these progressive records of a local tragedy:

Tuesday: "While fishing through the ice yesterday, Henry Whippet fell in the Saco river up to his neck. He was drawed out and took home."

Wednesday: 'Henry Whippett is in bed with a powerful bad cold. His folks are thinking some about calling in a doctor."

Thursday: "Henry Whippet is rapidly continuing to get no better. It now looks like he is fixing to break out with the pneumonia."

Friday: "Henry Whippet is sinking rapidly."

Saturday: "At nine o'clock this morning our esteemed fellow-citizen, Henry Whippet, Esq., went to his Maker entirely uncalled for."

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

First Aid for Gas Victims.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—In a recent article on carbon monoxide poisoning the statement was made that in case of an accident of that nature the thing to do was to summon a physician at once and then make an effort to secure from the most readily available source one of the machines that are used to resuscitate persons overcome by gas or other poisonous fumes.

That there is something else to be done in the way of first aid that is exceedingly important is asserted by Alexander Forward, managing director of the American Gas association, and he ought to know what he is talking about since his organization created a committee on resuscitation from gas asphyxiation, composed of some of the most eminent authorities in the United States, and has given wide circulation to the recommendations of the experts. Mr. Forward and his company are interested because they control a large number of gas companies thorughout the country and it is a matter of great importance that every man identified with their organization should know what to do in such emergencies.

Dr. Cecil K. Drinker, associate professor of applied physiology of the Medical School of Harvard university, was the chairman of the committee that made an exhaustive study of the subject. His associates were Dr. Walter B. Cannon, professor of physiology of the same school; Dr. L. Edsall, the dean of that school; Dr. Howard W. Haggard and Dr. Yandell Henderson, both of Yale university and both consulting physiologists to the United States Bureau of Mines; Dr. Lawrence J. Henderson and Dr. Francis W. Peabody, both of the Harvard Medical school; Dr. Royd R. Sayers, chief surgeon of the United States Bureau of Mines and a surgeon of the Public Health service; and Charles B. Scott, of the Accident Prevention committee of the American Gas association.

The conclusions reached by a group of such recognized leaders of their profession are accepted without question by physicians everywhere. Laymen will do well to read and learn.

The Prone Pressure Method.

The report explains that the reason that automobile exhaust gas, the gases from coal heating furnaces, the smoke from fires, producer gas, coke oven gas, blast furnace gas, carbureted water gas, coal gas, and other manufactured gases are poisonous if actually breathed is that they all contain carbon monoxide. When carbon monoxide is breathed it combines with the blood and the victim becomes asphyxiated just as if he were being gradually choked to death. As low as one-tenth of one per cent of carbon monoxide, or even less, will kill a man in time; one per cent will kill in a few minutes.

When a man is overcome by gas, it is stated, the first thing to do is to get him into fresh air quickly. Fresh air does not mean out of doors in cold weather. Many men have walked from a warm room containing gas only to collapse in the cold air outside. Take the patient to a room free from gas and comfortably warm. Be quick, but don't be unnecessarily rough.

If the patient is not breathing or his breathing stops, start artificial respiration at once by the prone pressure method. And—here is the point that Mr. Forward stresses—don't wait for a physician or any apparatus or any one or anything else. Get to work with your own hands. A delay of even a minute may be fatal.

The prone pressure method—known as the Schafer method—is urged as the best method for artificial respiration—better than any method using a mechanical device. If the victim is breathing, an artificial respiration apparatus may injure him. If he is not breathing, he may die while you are getting the apparatus or getting ready to use it. It is the opinion of the committee that such apparatus has led to the deaths of more people than it has saved.

Now, here is how you go about prone pressure resuscitation: As soon as the victim is clear of the gas feel with your finger in his mouth and throat and remove any foreign body, such as chewing gum, tobacco, false teeth, and the like. Do not stop to loosen his clothing. Lay him on his tummy, one arm extended directly over his head, the other bent at the elbow and with face to one side, resting on the hand or forearm, so that the nose and mouth are free for breathing. Kneel straddling the patient with your knees just below his hip bones, and place the palms of your hands on the small of the back with

In closing the Dreicer shop on Fifth Avenue the oldest jewel establishment in the town joins what someone calls "the lost parade." It was once the most exclusive establishment in the town. It did not cater to any save the bluebloods. The sugar daddies of that day were not welcomed. Today it is different.

And perhaps the last of the bluebloods to flourish in that era was Berry Wall, known as king of the dudes. Born to wealth, his wardrobe was a marvel to Brummels. He had from 200 to 250 suits of clothes. He changed with every new style but his poke collar and Ascot tie remained the same. These he never changed and visitors to Paris may see him now strolling the rue de Rivoli every afternoon toward Rumpelmayer's to tea—the same sort of collar and tie prevailing. His companion is a friendly Chow dog. Wall is nearing 70 and he has been to America but once since his voluntary exile. He found everything so changed he went back to the boulevards declaring he would never come again. All the people he knew well who survive are so frequently in Paris he does not suffer from loneliness.

LUMBER
For Every Use In Construction

In building, no other part of the construction requires such skill and judgement as does the selection of your lumber. The carpenter and tinner may do a poor job, the plumber may fall down on his work—all these can be repaired and remedied, but if the wood-work—the very vitals of your house be poor—if the beams crack, the flooring sag, the weather-boards warp—there is no redress—your house will be doomed.

Buy your lumber from us, and you'll have no such ordeal to anticipate. You can sleep in peace in the knowledge that every foot is perfect and that it is thoroughly seasoned.

EMMONS DRAFTS AMENDMENT TO HIS CROSSING BILL

PROPOSES VOTE IN NOVEMBER ON BOND ISSUE

Twenty-year Time Limit for Elimination of Death Traps.

ROADS PAY HALF

State, Municipalities and County Share in Cost.

By C. H. Haddox.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 5.—While both branches of the Ohio legislature here recessed over the week-end, Rep. R. W. Emmons, Columbiana county, today was drafting an amendment, which he proposes to introduce in the house early next week, to his resolution, offered in the house late Thursday. The resolution provides for submission to Ohio voters next November of a proposed amendment to the Ohio constitution permitting a $100,000,000 bond issue for the purpose of oliminating the approximately 2,000 dangerous railroad grade crossings throughout Ohio.

The proposed amendment to his resolution, Emmons said, will provide a 20-year time limit for the completion of this work, it, also is expected to provide for an additional state tax levy, on the general property duplicate, for the purpose of taking care of the state's share of the cost of eliminating the grade crossings.

Emmons' resolution provides that the railroads shall pay half of the most of this work, the state paying 25 per cent and the remaining 25 per cent being born by municipalities and counties. This additional tax levy, Emmons believed, need not exceed one-half of a mill and might be less than one-fourth of a mill. On the basis of a ¼ mill tax, the taxpayers would pay $1 annually on each $4,000 worth of property, he, or she, owned.

Donahey Endorses Plan.

Predicting that the proposed constitutional amendment will be adopted, if the Emmons' resolution is adopted by the state legislature, Director of Highways George Schlessinger expressed belief that the work of eliminating these grade crossings could be performed most effectively by creating a separate division, in the state highway department, for supervising this work.

Not taking into consideration the many thousands of persons who sustained temporary and permanent, but not fatel, injuries, during the past three years in Ohio at railroad crossings, more than 450 persons were killed in, or as a result of, accidents occurring at these crossings, according to records of the state bureau of vital statistics.

Property damage resulting from such accidents are not recorded by the state. Deaths, due to grade crossing accidents, in 1924, totaled 113; in 1925, 165, and 1926 they are expected to total about 200. The record for last year is not complete, but 180 such deaths for 1926 have already been recorded in the vital statistics bureau.

Hearty endorsement of the proposal to elminate grade crossings has been voiced by Governor Vic Donahey. The governor stated that, although he had not had time to study the Emmons' resolution, he had been told that it follows generally the suggestions the governor embodied in his recent message to the legislature.

COLLEEN MOORE AT AMERICAN

"Twinkletoes" Adapted From Limehouse District Tale.

"Twinkletoes" is the intriguing title of Colleen Moore's latest starring vehicle, which comes to the American theatre Monday for a three-day run.

It was adapted from Thomas Burke's famous tale of the Limehouse district of London, and the combination of star, story and setting make "Twinkletoes" one of the most promising entertainment offerings that has shown here in many moons.

Kenneth Harlan, Gladys Brockwell, Warner Oland, Julanne Johnston, Tully Marshall, John Philip Kolb and Lucian Littlefield bring to life other famous characters of the Burke story.

They portray Limehouse folks, picturesque characters from that London maritime slum where all races and kinds of humans meet around the wharves, tenements, dingy shops and dives, and sinister plots are born in the narrow, mysterious streets bordering the water front.

The action centers around a charming love affair between "Twinkletoes" and a young Limehouse pugilist, Chuck Lightfoot. Twink is a dancer in the Quayside theatre, and for this role Colleen has discarded her black Dutch bob and appears with curly golden hair.

The story is freely sprinkled with sparkling comedy, but a powerful menace continually haunts the bright, lovable little heroine; the sinister powers of the Limehouse and its denizens gather to destroy her—and keep the spectator tense with emotion.

There is the theatre manager and chorus master, named Doseleaf, to whom Twink's innocence appeals as a lure

State Senators Harry C. Carpenter and Earl Lewis and State Representatives Ralph Emmons and W. R. VanFossan will be urged to vote against this measure.

The directors also endorsed the joint resolution introduced by Emmons in the house of representatives this week which, if adopted, would direct state purchasing agents for Ohio institutions to buy Ohio-made pottery in the future. M. A. PANE, 70, VET RAILROAD MAN, RETIRES

Watchman at St. Clair Avenue Crossing for 18 Years.

38-YEAR RECORD

Born in Italy, But Was Naturalized as U. S. Citizen.

Michael A. Pane, 70, Cleveland and Pittsburgh railroad employe for 38 years, of which 18 were spent as crossing watchman at St. Clair avenue, retired today.

Pane was born at Adams, Italy, Jan. 11, 1857. He came to America December 13, 1881, at the age of 25 years, and stopped at Utica, N. Y., where he obtained employment on grade work for a new railroad.

He continued at this work for about a year, when he went to Verona, Pa., and again obtained employment on a new railroad line at that point. Six months later he moved to Germantown, Pa., where he remained one year then went to Elizabeth, Pa., and a year and a half later went to Indiana, having done the same kind of work for new railroad lines in each of these places.

HAROLD LLOYD IN COMEDY HIT

"The Kid Brother" at Ceramic Theatre Next Week.

Harold Lloyd is scheduled to lead the feature comedy parade for 1927, for his newest Paramount release, "The Kid Brother," is slated to reach the Ceramic on Monday for a week's run.

"The new year," said a Lloyd official, "should bring a flock of mountain boy comedies into being, for it's that type of picture which Lloyd has just completed, and in many quarters of filmdom Harold's creations are copied as religiously as the works of artists in any line. This is quite apparent when one considers the number of football and college pictures which followed 'The Freshman,' forerunner of the present cycle of similar productions. Following 'Grandma's Boy' there came an avalanche of comedies with a similar theme and in pursuit of 'Safety Last,' a flock of 'Safety Last' offerings and thrill pictures of various types, all modeled along the lines of the Lloyd opus, arrived.

"The entire Lloyd organization is confident that 'The Kid Brother' will be established as one of the comic's greatest. Even Lloyd, who rarely is any dynamo of enthusiasm, has waxed enthusiastic over this one."

The story of the new Lloyd is simple, yet forceful, according to studio reports. It relates the tale of the youngest son of a family of strong men—three brothers, and father—who control the mountain town in which they live.

TOKIO CROWDED FOR FUNERAL OF EMPEROR

Services for Yoshihito Will be Held on Monday.

COLORFUL EVENT

Thousands of Soldiers Will be on Duty in Streets.

TOKIO, Feb. 5.—Large numbers of persons from all parts of the empire began arriving here today to witness or participate in the funeral of the late Emperor Yoshihito which will be held Monday night. Thousands of visitors are expected, some coming from the Asiatic mainland.

In addition to the entire police force thousands of soldiers will be employed in guarding the streets and directing traffic Monday and Tuesday morning. It is anticipated that at least 100,000 persons, most of them school children or members of the Young Men's association will be massed in the "Gaisen Dora" or triumphal way, that leads through the outer grounds to the Imperial Palace to the Nijubashi gate during the slow passage of the funeral caravan.

The funeral procession itself, which will depart from the Imperial Palace at 6 o'clock in the evening, will be a colorful spectacle, profoundly impressive to the occidental spectator and profoundly moving to the Japanese. All the costumes worn by the marching mourners, except the uniforms of soldiers and sailors, will be old court style of feudal days.

Imperial princes and princesses will be garbed in the richly decorated robes which ancient court regulations prescribed for such an occasion. Cabinet ministers will wear costumes hallowed by centuries of tradition. The myriad of Shinto priests who will take part in the rites will be clothed in ceremonial garments specified by processional rites which go back so far as to be almost lost in the mists of antiquity. All the costumes had been especially made for the occasion.

The fact that the procession will be held at night will add to its picturesqueness. Thousands of lanterns and torches will light the way. These soft lights flittering through the embellished paper globes will shine on multi-colored oriental costumes giving a phantastic enchantment which one could never find outside the orient.

So elaborate were the preparations that it has been estimated the funeral will cost more than $1,000,000.

Prince Chichibu, brother of the reigning emperor, came from England to attend the funeral. He was a student at Oxford university, but is unlikely to return.

EMMONS DRAFTS AMENDMENT TO HIS CROSSING BILL

PROPOSES VOTE IN NOVEMBER ON BOND ISSUE

Twenty-year Time Limit for Elimination of Death Traps.

ROADS PAY HALF

State, Municipalities and County Share in Cost.

By C. H. Haddox.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 5.—While both branches of the Ohio legislature here recessed over the week-end, Rep. R. W. Emmons, Columbiana county, today was drafting an amendment, which he proposes to introduce in the house early next week, to his resolution, offered in the house late Thursday. The resolution provides for submission to Ohio voters next November of a proposed amendment to the Ohio constitution permitting a $100,000,000 bond issue for the purpose of eliminating the approximately 2,000 dangerous railroad grade crossings throughout Ohio.

The proposed amendment to his resolution, Emmons said, will provide a 20-year time limit for the completion of this work, it, also is expected to provide for an additional state tax levy, on the general property duplicate, for the purpose of taking care of the state's share of the cost of eliminating the grade crossings.

Emmons' resolution provides that the railroads shall pay half of the most of this work, the state paying 25 per cent and the remaining 25 per cent being born by municipalities and counties. This additional tax levy, Emmons believed, need not exceed one-half of a mill and might be less than one-fourth of a mill. On the basis of a ¼ mill tax, the taxpayers would pay $1 annually on each $4,000 worth of property, he, or she, owned.

Donahey Endorses Plan.

Predicting that the proposed constitutional amendment will be adopted, if the Emmons' resolution is adopted by the state legislature, Director of Highways George Schlessinger expressed belief that the work of eliminating these grade crossings could be performed most effectively by creating a separate division, in the state highway department, for supervising this work.

Not taking into consideration the many thousands of persons who sustained temporary and permanent, but not fatel, injuries, during the past three years in Ohio at railroad crossings, more than 450 persons were killed in, or as a result of, accidents occurring at these crossings, according to records of the state bureau of vital statistics.

Property damage resulting from such accidents are not recorded by the state. Deaths, due to grade crossing accidents, in 1924, totaled 113; in 1925, 165, and 1926 they are expected to total about 200. The record for last year is not complete, but 180 such deaths for 1926 have already been recorded in the vital statistics bureau.

Hearty endorsement of the proposal to elminate grade crossings has been voiced by Governor Vic Donahey. The governor stated that, although he had not had time to study the Emmons' resolution, he had been told that it follows generally the suggestions the governor embodied in his recent message to the legislature.

COLLEEN MOORE AT AMERICAN

"Twinkletoes" Adapted From Limehouse District Tale.

"Twinkletoes" is the intriguing title of Colleen Moore's latest starring vehicle, which comes to the American theatre Monday for a three-day run.

It was adapted from Thomas Burke's famous tale of the Limehouse district of London, and the combination of star, story and setting make "Twinkletoes" one of the most promising entertainment offerings that has shown here in many moons.

Kenneth Harlan, Gladys Brockwell, Warner Oland, Julanne Johnston, Tully Marshall, John Philip Kolb and Lucian Littlefield bring to life other famous characters of the Burke story.

They portray Limehouse folks, picturesque characters from that London maritime slum where all races and kinds of humans meet around the wharves, tenements, dingy shops and dives, and sinister plots are born in the narrow, mysterious streets bordering the water front.

The action centers around a charming love affair between "Twinkletoes" and a young Limehouse pugilist, Chuck Lightfoot. Twink is a dancer in the Quayside theatre, and for this role Colleen has discarded her black Dutch bob and appears with curly golden hair.

The story is freely sprinkled with sparkling comedy, but a powerful menace continually haunts the bright, lovable little heroine; the sinister powers of the Limehouse and its denizens gather to destroy her—and keep the spectator tense with emotion.

There is the theatre manager and chorus master, named Doseleaf, to whom Twink's innocence appeals as a lure

State Senators Harry C. Carpenter and Earl Lewis and State Representatives Ralph Emmons and W. R. VanFossan will be urged to vote against this measure.

The directors also endorsed the joint resolution introduced by Emmons in the house of representatives this week which, if adopted, would direct state purchasing agents for Ohio institutions to buy Ohio-made pottery in the future. This measure has the approval of all general ware manufacturers in the Buckeye state.

M. A. PANE, 70, VET RAILROAD MAN, RETIRES

Watchman at St. Clair Avenue Crossing for 18 Years.

38-YEAR RECORD

Born in Italy, But Was Naturalized as U. S. Citizen.

Michael A. Pane, 70, Cleveland and Pittsburgh railroad employe for 38 years, of which 18 were spent as crossing watchman at St. Clair avenue, retired today.

Pane was born at Adams, Italy, Jan. 11, 1857. He came to America December 13, 1881, at the age of 25 years, and stopped at Utica, N. Y., where he obtained employment on grade work for a new railroad.

He continued at this work for about a year, when he went to Verona, Pa., and again obtained employment on a new railroad line at that point. Six months later he moved to Germantown, Pa., where he remained one year then went to Elizabeth, Pa., and a year and a half later went to Indiana, having done the same kind of work for new railroad lines in each of these places.

Pane only remained in Indiana about a month, when he came to East Liverpool, and started working for the Pennsylvania on Section No. 4, Oct. 1, 1888, with Forman Dennis Hickey.

Pane worked on this section as trackman for 20 years, and then accepted employment as crossing watchman at St. Clair avenue, May 7, 1908, the duties of which position he has faithfully performed to the date of his retirement.

Pane was naturalized as a citizen of the United States in 1892, at East Liverpool. He was married October, 28, 1889, and to this union were born 11 children, all of whom are living and reside at East Liverpool.

HAROLD LLOYD IN COMEDY HIT

"The Kid Brother" at Ceramic Theatre Next Week.

Harold Lloyd is scheduled to lead the feature comedy parade for 1927, for his newest Paramount release, "The Kid Brother," is slated to reach the Ceramic on Monday for a week's run.

"The new year," said a Lloyd official, "should bring a flock of mountain boy comedies into being, for it's that type of picture which Lloyd has just completed, and in many quarters of filmdom Harold's creations are copied as religiously as the works of artists in any line. This is quite apparent when one considers the number of football and college pictures which followed 'The Freshman,' forerunner of the present cycle of similar productions. Following 'Grandma's Boy' there came an avalanche of comedies with a similar theme and in pursuit of 'Safety Last,' a flock of 'Safety Last' offerings and thrill pictures of various types, all modeled along the lines of the Lloyd opus, arrived.

"The entire Lloyd organization is confident that 'The Kid Brother' will be established as one of the comic's greatest. Even Lloyd, who rarely is any dynamo of enthusiasm, has waxed enthusiastic over this one."

The story of the new Lloyd is simple, yet forceful, according to studio reports. It relates the tale of the youngest son of a family of strong men—three brothers, and father—who control the mountain town in which they live.

MIDLAND MILL WORKER SHOT

John Budich, 35, Says he Was Bandit Victim.

Midland police today are investigating the mysterious shooting of John Budich, 35-year-old mill worker, who is in the Rochester General hospital suffering from a bullet wound in the back, which he claims to have sustained in an attempted hold-up.

Dr. J. A. Helfrich, who was summoned to attend him, ordered the man's removal to the hospital.

Budich told Sergant Keller of the Midland police department that two Negroes had held him up on his way to his boarding house, and when he resisted one of them shot him. About $55 in cash and a gold watch in Budich's clothes were not taken.

Police plan to question Budich at the hospital as soon as his condition permits.

TOKIO CROWDED FOR FUNERAL OF EMPEROR

Services for Yoshihito Will be Held on Monday.

COLORFUL EVENT

Thousands of Soldiers Will be on Duty in Streets.

TOKIO, Feb. 5.—Large numbers of persons from all parts of the empire began arriving here today to witness or participate in the funeral of the late Emperor Yoshihito which will be held Monday night. Thousands of visitors are expected, some coming from the Asiatic mainland.

In addition to the entire police force thousands of soldiers will be employed in guarding the streets and directing traffic Monday and Tuesday morning. It is anticipated that at least 100,000 persons, most of them school children or members of the Young Men's association will be massed in the "Gaisen Dora" or triumphal way, that leads through the outer grounds to the Imperial Palace to the Nijubashi gate during the slow passage of the funeral caravan.

The funeral procession itself, which will depart from the Imperial Palace at 6 o'clock in the evening, will be a colorful spectacle, profoundly impressive to the occidental spectator and profoundly moving to the Japanese. All the costumes worn by the marching mourners, except the uniforms of soldiers and sailors, will be old court style of feudal days.

Imperial princes and princesses will be garbed in the richly decorated robes which ancient court regulations prescribed for such an occasion. Cabinet ministers will wear costumes hallowed by centuries of tradition. The myriad of Shinto priests who will take part in the rites will be clothed in ceremonial garments specified by processional rites which go back so far as to be almost lost in the mists of antiquity. All the costumes had been especially made for the occasion.

The fact that the procession will be held at night will add to its picturesqueness. Thousands of lanterns and torches will light the way. These soft lights flittering through the embellished paper globes will shine on multi-colored oriental costumes giving a phantastic enchantment which one could never find outside the orient.

So elaborate were the preparations that it has been estimated the funeral will cost more than $1,000,000.

Prince Chichibu, brother of the reigning emperor, came from England to attend the funeral. He was a student at Oxford university, but is unlikely to return.

Keep it Up for Hours.

Then, while counting one, two and with arms held straight, swing forward slowly so that the weight of your body is gradually but not violently brought to bear upon the patient. While counting three, swing backward so as to remove the pressure, and rest while counting four, five. Repeat these operations deliberately, and continue this artificial respiration without interruption until natural breathing is restored—if necessary for four hours or longer, or until a physician declares rigor mortis has set in. If natural breathing stops after being restored, use resuscitation again.

As soon as artificial respiration has been started, and while it is being continued, an assistant should loosen any tight clothing about the patient's neck, chest, or waist, and the patient should be kept warm, as for him to become chilled means a strain on his already weakened vitality and may kill him or help to cause pneumonia. Never give an unconscious man anything to drink. It may choke him. Never administer whiskey, for it acts on a man in much the same way as gas and makes a gassed man worse. Hot black coffee is excellent if the patient is conscious enough to drink it. And the patient must be kept quiet. Any exertion may be fraught with serious consequences.

Supplementing this first aid the inhaler may be used and it is recommended that five per cent of carbon dioxide—the gas that is in soda water—be mixed with the oxygen. This makes the patient breathe much more deeply and the carbon dioxide also keeps the breathing from stopping.

And those who are succoring gas victims are warned not to take any chances on breathing the poisonous fumes even for a short time. If you have to go into gas to get a man out, remember that a handkerchief tied about the nose and mouth is not a gas mask. Many have died in the belief that it is. It does not stop carbon monoxide. It simply filters off the irritating fumes in smoke. If you must go into gas or smoke, wear a mask and air hose, or an oxygen breathing apparatus, or a gas mask with canister, and be sure the gas mask is specially made to stop carbon monoxide. A smoke mask or an amonia mask that does not stop carbon monoxide is particularly dangerous.

The importance of reiterated warnings against carbon monoxide and of disseminating information as to what to do in cases of monoxide poisoning, is shown by the fact that so many people will not believe the deadly nature of this gas until something happens to them. When it happens it is usually fatal unless someone is on hand who knows what to do and will do it in double-quick time.

Prone pressure first aid, by the way, is also effective in cases of electricity shock or drowning.

Germany Oversupplied With Physicians; Many Entering New Fields

BERLIN.—Germany is over-supplied with physicians. Medical students, now enrolled in German universities, have little chance of large practices in the future, unless their ability is quite unusual.

Physicians complain that even today there are not enough patients to go around and many German doctors, who are able practitioners, are having hard times, especially in the larger cities where physicians are particularly numerous.

Many doctors in Berlin and elsewhere have given up their practice altogether during the last few years and have gone into business or some other profession such as journalism.

Beware Winter's Colds and Chills

To Be Fit Keep the System Free From Toxins.

COLDS, chills and changing temperature throw extra burdens on our kidneys. Sluggish function is apt to permit retention of waste poisons in the blood and make one more susceptible to winter's ills. When such retention occurs, one feels achy, tired and listless—is subject to drowsy headaches, dizziness and perhaps a toxic backache. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by burning or scanty secretions. Doan's Pills have earned an enviable reputation in these conditions. Ask your neighbor!

REVIVAL MEETS HERE NEXT WEEK

Revival meetings in the Church of the Nazarene will continue next week in charge of Rev Edward C. Oney, of Ashland, Ky.

During the week large numbers have attended the services and many have professed conversion.

fingers over the ribs, the little finger just touching the lowest rib and the thumb alongside of the fingers.

Keep it Up for Hours.

Then, while counting one, two and with arms held straight, swing forward slowly so that the weight of your body is gradually but not violently brought to bear upon the patient. While counting three, swing backward so as to remove the pressure, and rest while counting four, five. Repeat these operations deliberately, and continue this artificial respiration without interruption until natural breathing is restored—if necessary for four hours or longer, or until a physician declares rigor mortis has set in. If natural breathing stops after being restored, use resuscitation again.

As soon as artificial respiration has been started, and while it is being continued, an assistant should loosen any tight clothing about the patient's neck, chest, or waist, and the patient should be kept warm, as for him to become chilled means a strain on his already weakened vitality and may kill him or help to cause pneumonia. Never give an unconscious man anything to drink. It may choke him. Never administer whiskey, for it acts on a man in much the same way as gas and makes a gassed man worse Hot black coffee is excellent if the patient is conscious enough to drink it. And the patient must be kept quiet. Any exertion may be fraught with serious consequences.

Supplementing this first aid the inhaler may be used and it is recommended that five per cent of carbon dioxide—the gas that is in soda water—be mixed with the oxygen. This makes the patient breathe much more deeply and the carbon dioxide also keeps the breathing from stopping.

And those who are succoring gas victims are warned not to take any chances on breathing the poisonous fumes even for a short time. If you have to go into gas to get a man out, remember that a handkerchief tied about the nose and mouth is not a gas mask. Many have died in the belief that it is. It does not stop carbon monoxide. It simply filters off the irritating fumes in smoke. If you must go into gas or smoke, wear a mask and air hose, or an oxygen breathing apparatus, or a gas mask with canister, and be sure the gas mask is specially made to stop carbon monoxide. A smoke mask or an amonia mask that does not stop carbon monoxide is particularly dangerous.

The importance of reiterated warnings against carbon monoxide and of disseminating information as to what to do in cases of monoxide poisoning, is shown by the fact that so many people will not believe the deadly nature of this gas until something happens to them. When it happens it is usually fatal unless someone is on hand who knows what to do and will do it in double-quick time.

Prone pressure first aid, by the way, is also effective in cases of electricity shock or drowning.

Germany Oversupplied With Physicians; Many Entering New Fields

BERLIN.—Germany is over-supplied with physicians. Medical students, now enrolled in German universities, have little chance of large practices in the future, unless their ability is quite unusual.

Physicians complain that even today there are not enough patients to go around and many German doctors, who are able practitioners, are having hard times, especially in the larger cities where physicians are particularly numerous.

Many doctors in Berlin and elsewhere have given up their practice altogether during the last few years and have gone into business or some other profession such as journalism.

Miss Mary Louise Gramling

Conneaut, Ohio—"Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets have done wonders for my little girl's kidneys. Ever since she was a small child she suffered from weak kidneys. I doctored and gave her medicine but could find nothing that seemed to help her or strengthen her kidneys until, thru the advice of a relative, I started to give her 'Anuric Tablets' and by the time I had given her two bottles, her kidneys were in fine condition and have given her no more trouble."—Mrs. R. Beware Winter's Colds and Chills

To Be Fit Keep the System Free From Toxins.

COLDS, chills and changing temperature throw extra burdens on our kidneys. Sluggish function is apt to permit retention of waste poisons in the blood and make one more susceptible to winter's ills. When such retention occurs, one feels achy, tired and listless—is subject to drowsy headaches, dizziness and perhaps a toxic backache. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by burning or scanty secretions. Doan's Pills have earned an enviable reputation in these conditions. Ask your neighbor!

The parent will find it interesting and helpful to have the child take up the question each day and aid it in finding the answer in the Scriptures, thus developing a knowledge of the Bible and where to find in it the things decided. Send or bring the little folks to the class Sunday at 1:45 p. m. The "Ceramic Cafeteria Auditorium." 121 West Fifth Street.

555. What nation was destroyed because it was so wicked?

Answer: Sodom. See Genesis 19: 23-25.

556. Their punishment was death; but was it to be an everlasting punishment; that is, the second death?

Answer: No. They are to "return to their former state" (Ezekiel 16:53,-55) and they will have a better chance; it will be "more tolerable" for them than for other cities that were not destroyed. See Matthew 10:15.

557. Will there be a period of time when all the willfully wicked will be destroyed forever?

Answer: Yes. It is called "the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men."—2 Peter 3:7.

558. How long a period of time will it be?

Answer: A thousand years.

559. Besides being a day of perdition, or everlasting destruction what else is it called?

Answer: It is called "the judgment day;" because all are to have a full, fair trial before they are judged worthy or unworthy of everlasting life. "God hath appointed a day (thousand-year-day) in which he will (in the future) judge the world in righteousness." (Acts 17:31). See also Matthew 25:31-46 and Revelation 11:17-18.

560. At what time will a great many die the second death — be destroyed as unworthy of everlasting life?

Answer: At the end of the thousand-year judgment day. See Revelation 20:7-9.

561. Will any die the second death during the thousand-year judgment day?

Answer: Yes. "The child shall die an hundred years old." (Isaiah 65:20) That is to say, that any one that still remains a child—has made no progress for a hundred years—"shall be destroyed from among the people." (Acts 3:22-23). "The sinner being an hundred years old shall be accursed" (judged unworthy of everlasting life) —Isaiah 65:20.

Promiscuous dancing would be harmless—if all the dancers were made of wood.

And Azariah, the son of Oded, said: "Hear ye me, Asa, the Lord is with you, while ye be with him; but if ye forsake him, he will forsake you." That doesn't sound like "once in grace, always in grace," does it?

THE KING has come to town. Come and see for yourself.

One question for each day is provided. The parent will find it interesting and helpful to have the child take up the question each day and aid it in finding the answer in the Scriptures, thus developing a knowledge of the Bible and where to find in it the things decided. Send or bring the little folks to the class Sunday at 1:45 p. m. The "Ceramic Cafeteria Auditorium." 121 West Fifth Street.

555. What nation was destroyed because it was so wicked?

Answer: Sodom. See Genesis 19: 23-25.

556. Their punishment was death; but was it to be an everlasting punishment; that is, the second death?

Answer: No. They are to "return to their former state" (Ezekiel 16:53,-55) and they will have a better chance; it will be "more tolerable" for them than for other cities that were not destroyed. See Matthew 10:15.

557. Will there be a period of time when all the willfully wicked will be destroyed forever?

Answer: Yes. It is called "the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men."—2 Peter 3:7.

558. How long a period of time will it be?

Answer: A thousand years.

559. Besides being a day of perdition, or everlasting destruction what else is it called?

Answer: It is called "the judgment day;" because all are to have a full, fair trial before they are judged worthy or unworthy of everlasting life. "God hath appointed a day (thousand-year-day) in which he will (in the future) judge the world in righteousness." (Acts 17:31). See also Matthew 25:31-46 and Revelation 11:17-18.

560. At what time will a great many die the second death — be destroyed as unworthy of everlasting life?

Answer: At the end of the thousand-year judgment day. See Revelation 20:7-9.

561. Will any die the second death during the thousand-year judgment day?

Answer: Yes. "The child shall die an hundred years old." (Isaiah 65:20) That is to say, that any one that still remains a child—has made no progress for a hundred years—"shall be destroyed from among the people." (Acts 3:22-23). "The sinner being an hundred years old shall be accursed" (judged unworthy of everlasting life) —Isaiah 65:20.

REV. E. E. LASHLEY'S SERMON ON "JOYS OF TEMPTATION"

Discourse Delivered by Pastor of First Presbyterian Church of Newell.

Text James 1-2 My brethren count it all joy when you fall in divers (many kinds of) temptations.

The James who is the author of this letter is spoken of in Paul's letter to the Galatians as a "brother" of our Lord; and, in the Acts we learn that he was as at the head of the Christian church in Jerusalem. He interprets the teachings of the Christ in their bearing on the daily conduct of life, and is often regarded as one of the most practical of the New Testament writers, in contrast with St. Paul who interprets the teachings of the Redeemer of men, especially in the Letter to the Romans from a doctrinal viewpoint. St. Paul emphasizes the beliefs of men, St. James the deeds of men. The one says that we should believe the teachings of the Christ, the other calls us to express the teachings of Christ in terms of life.

James has striking views as to the temptations of life. To him the strength, power and beauty of the Christian life do not shine so brightly as when meeting its foes, conquering them in battle, and coming off the field as a triumphant victor. This evidently is what he means when he refers to them as a "joy." How often we pray, "Lead us not into temptation," and no doubt they are often foes to be avoided, but it all depends upon the way in which we meet them. In resisting the temptations of life we may show forth the moral heroism of Christian character, the power of Christian principles and through them glorify our Lord so they may be the occasion of "joy." With these thoughts in mind let us note:

I. First:—Temptations are a joy in that they emphasize the fact that the Soul of man is of great value.

Each one in the world finds himself overatured by opposing interests, one carnal, sensuous and worldly; the other moral, spiritual and divine. One set of forces emenate from the devil's world, the other from God's world. One works in the interests of the kingdom of evil, and the other in the interests of the kingdom of the good. To which are you responding by the homage and service of your life? Evil has never been so alluring, attractive and deceiving as it is today. Evidently Satan places a great value upon man's soul.

God also values man's life. Man was completely a captive in the service of evil, so God sent his only begotten Son to rescue and save. He emptied the glory world of the One altogether lovely, the chiefest among ten thousand" that whosoever believeth upon Him might not perish but have everlasting life. As a sacrifice in grace and love He died to atone for man's sin: what is Calvary but man's eulogy written in the characters of our Redeeemer's own life crimson. He who belittles life cheapens the sacrifice of Calvary, for the gift of His Son was the price He was willing to pay. Evidently God regards man's soul as of great value.

II. Secondlp, Temptations May be a Joy Because They Show Some Goodness in the One to Whom Temptations Come.

Sin does not appeal in the form of an allurement to one morally and spiritually lost and dead. He is the finished product of sin and evil ways are his native ways. The Bible teaches that there is such a state as being "dead in trespasses and sins," as being so low in iniquity as to be "past feeling."

It is possible to so indulge and feed the animal in human nature that the soul, man's higher, spiritual self, is starved, dwarfed, atrophied, so that religion and the appeals of holy faith are as a dead language to one in such a lost condition. Only the animal is alive. To present to these unfortunates the higher life in Christ, the holy joys of communion with God, is like offering a copy Emmerson's essays to a nest of kittens, or having a symphony orchestra play Handel's "Messiah" to a rat-terrier pup. From such the criminal classes are usually recruited the stories of their misdeeds shocking the world through the newspapers, lowering, yes destroying the ideals of our youth. To them sin is "their native air," and evil their much loved way. So when the appeals of sin excite a war within the soul, awakening storms of protest of the better against the worse self within us all, it shows that the elements of good have not all yet been crushed to death, that "down in the human heart feelings lie buried that grace may restore," meaning hope and possibilities of a great redemption through the power of God, mighty to save.

We believe that the better one is and the higher he mounts on the high planes of Christian character the more he is tempted. Did you ever notice that the wind blows more firecely on the peak of a mountain. The more holy the character, and the finer one's sensitiveness to the distinctions between right and wrong, the more subtle the appeal of sin. So it was with Jesus. We are told He was led by the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil," Spirit-filled but devil tempted. Yes we are have our temptations no matter how good." It is one thing to be tempted, another thing to fall."

III. Thirdly, Temptations May be a Joy Because Strength of Character and Moral Power Result When Temptations are Resisted and Driven Back.

Ours is a world where strength comes through struggle and wrestling. It is a world where every new bridge must be tested by a string of locomotives to prove it will carry up a string of lighter passenger coaches. Desiring a mast for a ship or a beam for a noble building the woodsman does not seek a tree grown in the sheltered forest, but he goes into the open pasture where the tree has wrestled long with every opposing storm that for a century has beat upon it. The little boy in school is having a difficult time with his long division in arithmetic, and, oh, what a tax upon his patience and nerves! But every problem solved paves the way for problems more difficult, till by and by the richly developed mind is the result, and the fine strong young man stands forth.

Such is the picture of what temptations resisted do for the soul. Every temptation to be mean, to lie, to be licentious, to harbor hatred, to be proud, to neglect God and his claims, all of these if properly met by the power of Grace become stepping stones up which one may climb to higher things.

Friends, are your temptations opportunities to moral and spiritual victories? Are they your chance at moral power? They were to the perfect Man of Galilee, and they may be so to your all.

The story is told that inside an Austrian palace a young prince saw a crowd approaching. He though they were his enemies on a mission of harm. In reality they were his friends. They entered the palace door and he, in his fright and hurry to escape ran up one stair after another til he reached the highest room in the tower where he barricated the door. The perusing crowd broke in the door, captured the prince and placed upon his head the crown of Austria. Then he stood forth a king. God truly has placed us here in a world of possible sin to all, but every sin met and conquered means a crown to a noble manhood and a beautiful womanhood.

IV. Lastly note: From Every Temptation There is a Way of Escape.

We are told in Holy writ, and the statement is true to our experience that "God is faithful who will not suffer you to be tempted above that which you are able, but will with every temptation provide a way of escape." There is a power in Divine grace to overcome all manner of sin so that we will be held accountable for the way we meet sin at the day of judgment and must "give an account for the deeds done in the body." It will there be seen whether we have used it or used it not.

"CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP," IS SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Everybody's Deepest Interest is in Question of How to Live, Says Ellis.

By William T. Ellis.

Everybody's deepest interest is in the question of how to live. That outranks the other question of how to make a living. Each mortal has a right to life, to real life, to the best life. We are not mere passive pieces in a picture puzzle of existence, or wooden pawns in a game played by blind fate Every human being is an individual personality, with an inalienable right to fullest development. In the very least of us, this divine dower cries out for expression. With all the power we possess, we protest that we are not chips on a stream, not straws in a wind, not parts of a machine, not helpless creatures of circumstances. Every one of us knows himself to be a spiritual entity, designed for freedom. Our innermost selves cry aloud for an experience that shall be more than the routine of a laborer, a clerk, a tender of business, a housekeeper, a lawyer, a mechanic, a mere money-maker. We scorn the lot of that Frenchman whose cynical epitaph ran:

"Born a man, died a grocer.'

In colloquial phrases, How may a person get hold of life by the handle, so as to wield it, instead of being wielded by it?

There are two principal answers, only one of which is true. That given by the rebellious spirits of the present generation is to use life as a toy. Play with it, toss it idly about, flout it, break it, throw it away, and by no means regard it seriously.

This may be called the "smart Aleck" philosophy, which disdains any serious or comprehensive attitude toward life. Its program is to live for the moment, and to satisfy every desire that is near and noisy. Whatever is old is fogyish and foolish. (By the way, what will happen when the Jazzites waken up to the realization that life is long and real and earnest, and that it contains old age, as well as youth? "Smart Aleckism" is a philosophy only for immaturity.) Duty, drudgery, responsibility, veneration—these are taboo words and taboo principles with our merry materialists. They are only out for "a good time," even if they must have it by being bad.

There is another and truer answer for those who would take hold of life by the handle. It is expressed in all the stored-up literature and lore of the race; but best in Holy Writ. This principle that every man's life has opportunities and obligations outside of himself. In the Christian conception, life is a mission, a responsibility, a stewardship. It is a talent entrusted to us by God, for the use and increase of which we are accountable.

By this interpretation, man is sent into the world with powers and possibilities for development. His chief end is to fulfill his capabilities of growth and of service. Because he partakes of the Divine nature, he has been given a Divine mission. His own soul-stature depends upon his acceptance of responsibilities commensurate with his character. A pregnant word of wise old Paul—one of the few explicit statements in Scripture of why Christ was offered up on the Cross—puts the principle thus, in his Second Letter to the Corinthians (5:15: "He died for all, that they that live should no longer live unto themselves, but unto Him who for their sakes died and rose again." And, of course, to live for Christ is to live for men: "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto Me."

So life is not a pastime, but a purpose. We take it by the handle when we grasp it as God's gift, meant to be used for its highest ends. In the parable of Jesus which is this Lesson, life is a talent to be employed. This stewardship conception, which runs through all of the Bible, puts power into living. It not only saves the spirit from pessimism and discouragement, and from the withering blight of aimlessness, but it also lifts it up to the Divine level. With Jesus, the person who has devoted himself to this sacred conception of life may say, reverently, "The Father worketh hitherto, and I work." The talent-man finds himself to be in unity with the universe; in league with the stones of the field;" bound up in the bundle of God's will. Existence yields its sweetest secrets to those persons who have apprehended this primary significance of life, as a talent to be possessed and employed, and increased, in responsibility to a wise Father's will.

Two Successful, One Failure

Here is a "success" story that will stand all tests. Its sanity, sensibleness and accord with the known conditions of life are apparent. We call it the Parable of the Talents, as related by Jesus. He pictured a rich man as about to go on a journey, giving eight talents—nearly ten thousand dollars in all; for the Roman talent was worth approximately twelve hundred dollars—into the keeping of three servants. One man was entrusted with five talents, one with two talents, and another with one talent. The first two doubled their capital during their master's absence, but the third buried his one talent; and then blamed his employer for his own failure to increase it.

Human ability is not on a flat level, according to this story. All men are not equal, except in rights and opportunity. The landlord in the parable distributed the talents "to every man according to his several ability." There are five-talent men and three-talent men and one-talent men in every sphere—with the possibility that the five-talent man may cravenly slip into the one-talent classification, and that the one-talent man may climb into the five-talent level. Each is to be rewarded according to the use he makes of his own gifts. Many a modest mother, who has never been heard of outside of her own neighborhood, is more of a success than a spectacular statesman who has been faithless to his highest possibilities. Failure like success, is relative.

We can easily understand the two successes in the story. They were normal men, accepting a trust and seizing an opportunity. But what about the man who somehow "cannot get along." He buried his talent, as the peasant in the East buries his savings. His was the old-stocking conception of thrift. He did not trust banks, or his fellow men. Doubtless because he was only a one-talent man, timit, shiftless, irresponsible, he let his gift lie idle.

Chester Christian Church Was Organized in 1903.

26 ON CHARTER

Rev. Alfred E. Sims Serving Third Term as Pastor.

The town of Chester boasted of a population of nearly 3,000 persons before any attempt was made to organize a Christian church there.

In the fall of 1903, Secretary Linkletter, of the West Virginia Christian Missionary society, called a meeting of those persons who had belonged to Christian churches elsewhere and who had taken up their residence in Chester. Fifteen persons responded to the call for the session which was held in the school building.

A temporary organization was formed and F. M. Pittman, student at Bethany college, was called to preach. For six months he continued to make his week-end visits to Chester. Finally during the late spring of 1904 Gerald Culbertson, also a student at Bethany, was called as pastor. Like Pittman, Culbertson made week-end visits to Chester until after his graduation in 1906.

Permanent organization of the Chester church was formed in May, 1904, with 26 charter members. Six of these men are still affiliated with the church, others have moved away or died.

Meetings were held first in a hall at First street and later the congregation moved to a hall in Virginia avenue. Soon after the temporary organization was formed a lot, 40x140 feet, had been purchased as the site of the present building.

One very hot Sunday morning of July, 1904, being oppressed by the little hall where the congregation was meeting, it was decided to buy a tent and place it on the lot for the services during the summer months. Before the canvass for funds was complete it was found that more than was needed to buy a tent had been secured, so it was decided to put up a more permanent building.

The congregation completed the campaign for funds and with the aid of a $600 loan from the Church Extension society, they erected a brick building, 40x68 feet, much of the labor being donated. This was occupied on Christmas Day, 1904, and the loan was paid off in five years. Much credit is due to Mr. Culbertson for this first success.

In 1906, Mr. Culberson resigned and during the next five years there followed in succession as pastors, C. N. Filson, R. B. Strickler and Asa B. Stickley.

About 1910, Miss Mary E. McDaniel gave to the church a lot adjoining the church and a house and another lot for a parsonage, located in Indiana avenue, near Second street. It was also during 1910 that an addition was built back of the church which added a baptistry, three class rooms and the basement which was used as the meeting place for the men's class, organized about this time.

It was during 1910 or 1911 that Gerald Culberson was called back for a revival campaign which proved to be one of the most beneficial ever held in Chester. The remarkable thing about it was that of the 78 members received into the church during the campaign, 62 were heads of families, fathers and mothers. In the meeting held by S. M. Martin in 1923 nearly 100 members were added.

C. G. Huffer was called in 1912 and it was during his pastorate of nearly three years that the present commodious and up-to-date church building was erected. Another lot adjoining the church was purchased in 1912, making the property 120x140 feet in the most central location in town.

The building campaign was launched in the early spring of 1913. The old structure was razed and the new was so nearly completed that services were held in it on Christmas. However, the dedication was not until the spring of 1914, at which time pledges were taken to cover all indebtedness payable in five years.

The church is a brick building consisting of auditorium, lecture room, 10 class rooms and basement with dining room and kitchen and assembly room. The main auditorium and lecture rooms can be thrown together by rolling partition, giving seating capacity of about 500.

Since 1914 there have been five different pastors: C. E. Rostofer, two years; John R. Clark, two years; E. Z. Gallager, one year; W. Grant Ward, four years; Alfred E. Sims, present pastor, who has been there nearly three years.

During 1923, the old parsonage was sold and the property directly across the street from the church, consisting of two lots with an eight-room house, garage, fruit trees and garden, was purchased. A conservative estimate of the value of the church property, including the parsonage, would be $60,000.

At present there are nearly 400 members. There is a graded Bible school with classes suitable to all ages and an attendance running close to 300 or more. A daily vacation Bible school was conducted last summer. There is a Young People's society of Christian Endeavor from which one young man has gone out to enter the ministry and was ordained Dec. 26, 1926.

A troop of Boy Scouts was organized last spring and is growing in interest and in numbers.

More than 1,200 people have been members of the church at some time during the past 23 years.

Such is the picture of what temptations resisted do for the soul. Every temptation to be mean, to lie, to be licentious, to harbor hatred, to be proud, to neglect God and his claims, all of these if properly met by the power of Grace become stepping stones up which one may climb to higher things.

Friends, are your temptations opportunities to moral and spiritual victories? Are they your chance at moral power? They were to the perfect Man of Galilee, and they may be so to your all.

The story is told that inside an Austrian palace a young prince saw a crowd approaching. He though they were his enemies on a mission of harm. In reality they were his friends. They entered the palace door and he, in his fright and hurry to escape ran up one stair after another til he reached the highest room in the tower where he barricated the door. The perusing crowd broke in the door, captured the prince and placed upon his head the crown of Austria. Then he stood forth a king. God truly has placed us here in a world of possible sin to all, but every sin met and conquered means a crown to a noble manhood and a beautiful womanhood.

IV. Lastly note: From Every Temptation There is a Way of Escape.

We are told in Holy writ, and the statement is true to our experience that "God is faithful who will not suffer you to be tempted above that which you are able, but will with every temptation provide a way of escape." There is a power in Divine grace to overcome all manner of sin so that we will be held accountable for the way we meet sin at the day of judgment and must "give an account for the deeds done in the body." It will there be seen whether we have used it or used it not.

"CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP," IS SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Everybody's Deepest Interest is in Question of How to Live, Says Ellis.

By William T. Ellis.

Everybody's deepest interest is in the question of how to live. That outranks the other question of how to make a living. Each mortal has a right to life, to real life, to the best life. We are not mere passive pieces in a picture puzzle of existence, or wooden pawns in a game played by blind fate. Every human being is an individual personality, with an inalienable right to fullest development. In the very least of us, this divine dower cries out for expression. With all the power we possess, we protest that we are not chips on a stream, not straws in a wind, not parts of a machine, not helpless creatures of circumstances. Every one of us knows himself to be a spiritual entity, designed for freedom. Our innermost selves cry aloud for an experience that shall be more than the routine of a laborer, a clerk, a tender of business, a housekeeper, a lawyer, a mechanic, a mere money-maker. We scorn the lot of that Frenchman whose cynical epitaph ran:

"Born a man, died a grocer.'

In colloquial phrases, How may a person get hold of life by the handle, so as to wield it, instead of being wielded by it?

There are two principal answers, only one of which is true. That given by the rebellious spirits of the present generation is to use life as a toy. Play with it, toss it idly about, flout it, break it, throw it away, and by no means regard it seriously.

This may be called the "smart Aleck" philosophy, which disdains any serious or comprehensive attitude toward life. Its program is to live for the moment, and to satisfy every desire that is near and noisy. Whatever is old is fogyish and foolish. (By the way, what will happen when the Jazzites waken up to the realization that life is long and real and earnest, and that it contains old age, as well as youth? "Smart Aleckism" is a philosophy only for immaturity.) Duty, drudgery, responsibility, veneration—these are taboo words and taboo principles with our merry materialists. They are only out for "a good time," even if they must have it by being bad.

There is another and truer answer for those who would take hold of life by the handle. It is expressed in all the stored-up literature and lore of the race; but best in Holy Writ. This principle that every man's life has opportunities and obligations outside of himself. In the Christian conception, life is a mission, a responsibility, a stewardship. It is a talent entrusted to us by God, for the use and increase of which we are accountable.

By this interpretation, man is sent into the world with powers and possibilities for development. His chief end is to fulfill his capabilities of growth and of service. Because he partakes of the Divine nature, he has been given a Divine mission. His own soul-stature depends upon his acceptance of responsibilities commensurate with his character. A pregnant word of wise old Paul—one of the few explicit statements in Scripture of why Christ was offered up on the Cross—puts the principle thus, in his Second Letter to the Corinthians (5:15: "He died for all, that they that live should no longer live unto themselves, but unto Him who for their sakes died and rose again." And, of course, to live for Christ is to live for men: "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto Me."

So life is not a pastime, but a purpose. We take it by the handle when we grasp it as God's gift, meant to be used for its highest ends. In the parable of Jesus which is this Lesson, life is a talent to be employed. This stewardship conception, which runs through all of the Bible, puts power into living. It not only saves the spirit from pessimism and discouragement, and from the withering blight of aimlessness, but it also lifts it up to the Divine level. With Jesus, the person who has devoted himself to this sacred conception of life may say, reverently, "The Father worketh hitherto, and I work." The talent-man finds himself to be in unity with the universe; in league with the stones of the field;" bound up in the bundle of God's will. Existence yields its sweetest secrets to those persons who have apprehended this primary significance of life, as a talent to be possessed and employed, and increased, in responsibility to a wise Father's will.

Two Successful, One Failure

Here is a "success" story that will stand all tests. Its sanity, sensibleness and accord with the known conditions of life are apparent. We call it the Parable of the Talents, as related by Jesus. He pictured a rich man as about to go on a journey, giving eight talents—nearly ten thousand dollars in all; for the Roman talent was worth approximately twelve hundred dollars—into the keeping of three servants. One man was entrusted with five talents, one with two talents, and another with one talent. The first two doubled their capital during their master's absence, but the third buried his one talent; and then blamed his employer for his own failure to increase it.

Human ability is not on a flat level, according to this story. All men are not equal, except in rights and opportunity. The landlord in the parable distributed the talents "to every man according to his several ability." There are five-talent men and three-talent men and one-talent men in every sphere—with the possibility that the five-talent man may cravenly slip into the one-talent classification, and that the one-talent man may climb into the five-talent level. Each is to be rewarded according to the use he makes of his own gifts. Many a modest mother, who has never been heard of outside of her own neighborhood, is more of a success than a spectacular statesman who has been faithless to his highest possibilities. Failure like success, is relative.

We can easily understand the two successes in the story. They were normal men, accepting a trust and seizing an opportunity. But what about the man who somehow "cannot get along." He buried his talent, as the peasant in the East buries his savings. His was the old-stocking conception of thrift. He did not trust banks, or his fellow men. Doubtless because he was only a one-talent man, timit, shiftless, irresponsible, he let his gift lie idle.

FUND FOR TENT NUCLEUS FOR WORSHIP HOUSE

Chester Christian Church Was Organized in 1903.

26 ON CHARTER

Rev. Alfred E. Sims Serving Third Term as Pastor.

The town of Chester boasted of a population of nearly 3,000 persons before any attempt was made to organize a Christian church there.

In the fall of 1903, Secretary Linkletter, of the West Virginia Christian Missionary society, called a meeting of those persons who had belonged to Christian churches elsewhere and who had taken up their residence in Chester. Fifteen persons responded to the call for the session which was held in the school building.

A temporary organization was formed and F. M. Pittman, student at Bethany college, was called to preach. For six months he continued to make his week-end visits to Chester. Finally during the late spring of 1904 Gerald Culbertson, also a student at Bethany, was called as pastor. Like Pittman, Culbertson made week-end visits to Chester until after his graduation in 1906.

Permanent organization of the Chester church was formed in May, 1904, with 26 charter members. Six of these men are still affiliated with the church, others have moved away or died.

Meetings were held first in a hall at First street and later the congregation moved to a hall in Virginia avenue. Soon after the temporary organization was formed a lot, 40x140 feet, had been purchased as the site of the present building.

One very hot Sunday morning of July, 1904, being oppressed by the little hall where the congregation was meeting, it was decided to buy a tent and place it on the lot for the services during the summer months. Before the canvass for funds was complete it was found that more than was needed to buy a tent had been secured, so it was decided to put up a more permanent building.

The congregation completed the campaign for funds and with the aid of a $600 loan from the Church Extension society, they erected a brick building, 40x68 feet, much of the labor being donated. This was occupied on Christmas Day, 1904, and the loan was paid off in five years. Much credit is due to Mr. Culbertson for this first success.

In 1906, Mr. Culberson resigned and during the next five years there followed in succession as pastors, C. N. Filson, R. B. Strickler and Asa B. Stickley.

About 1910, Miss Mary E. McDaniel gave to the church a lot adjoining the church and a house and another lot for a parsonage, located in Indiana avenue, near Second street. It was also during 1910 that an addition was built back of the church which added a baptistry, three class rooms and the basement which was used as the meeting place for the men's class, organized about this time.

It was during 1910 or 1911 that Gerald Culberson was called back for a revival campaign which proved to be one of the most beneficial ever held in Chester. The remarkable thing about it was that of the 78 members received into the church during the campaign, 62 were heads of families, fathers and mothers. In the meeting held by S. M. Martin in 1923 nearly 100 members were added.

C. G. Huffer was called in 1912 and it was during his pastorate of nearly three years that the present commodious and up-to-date church building was erected. Another lot adjoining the church was purchased in 1912, making the property 120x140 feet in the most central location in town.

The building campaign was launched in the early spring of 1913. The old structure was razed and the new was so nearly completed that services were held in it on Christmas. However, the dedication was not until the spring of 1914, at which time pledges were taken to cover all indebtedness, payable in five years.

The church is a brick building consisting of auditorium, lecture room, 10 class rooms and basement with dining room and kitchen and assembly room. The main auditorium and lecture room can be thrown together by rolling partition, giving seating capacity of about 500.

Since 1914 there have been five different pastors: C. E. Rostofer, two years; John R. Clark, two years; E. Z. Gallager, one year; W. Grant Ward, four years; Alfred E. Sims, present pastor, who has been there nearly three years.

During 1923, the old parsonage was sold and the property directly across the street from the church, consisting of two lots with an eight-room house, garage, fruit trees and garden, was purchased. A conservative estimate of the value of the church property, including the parsonage, would be $60,000.

At present there are nearly 400 members. There is a graded Bible school with classes suitable to all ages and an attendance running close to 300 or more. A daily vacation Bible school was conducted last summer. There is a Young People's society of Christian Endeavor from which one young man has gone out to enter the ministry and was ordained Dec. 26, 1926.

A troop of Boy Scouts was organized last spring and is growing in interest and in numbers.

More than 1,200 people have been members of the church at some time during the past 23 years.

New Testing Machine For Building Trade Has Great Pressure

CLEVELAND.—A machine for testing building materials and capable of exerting a pressure of 1,000,000 pounds, soon will be installed at Case School of Applied Science here.

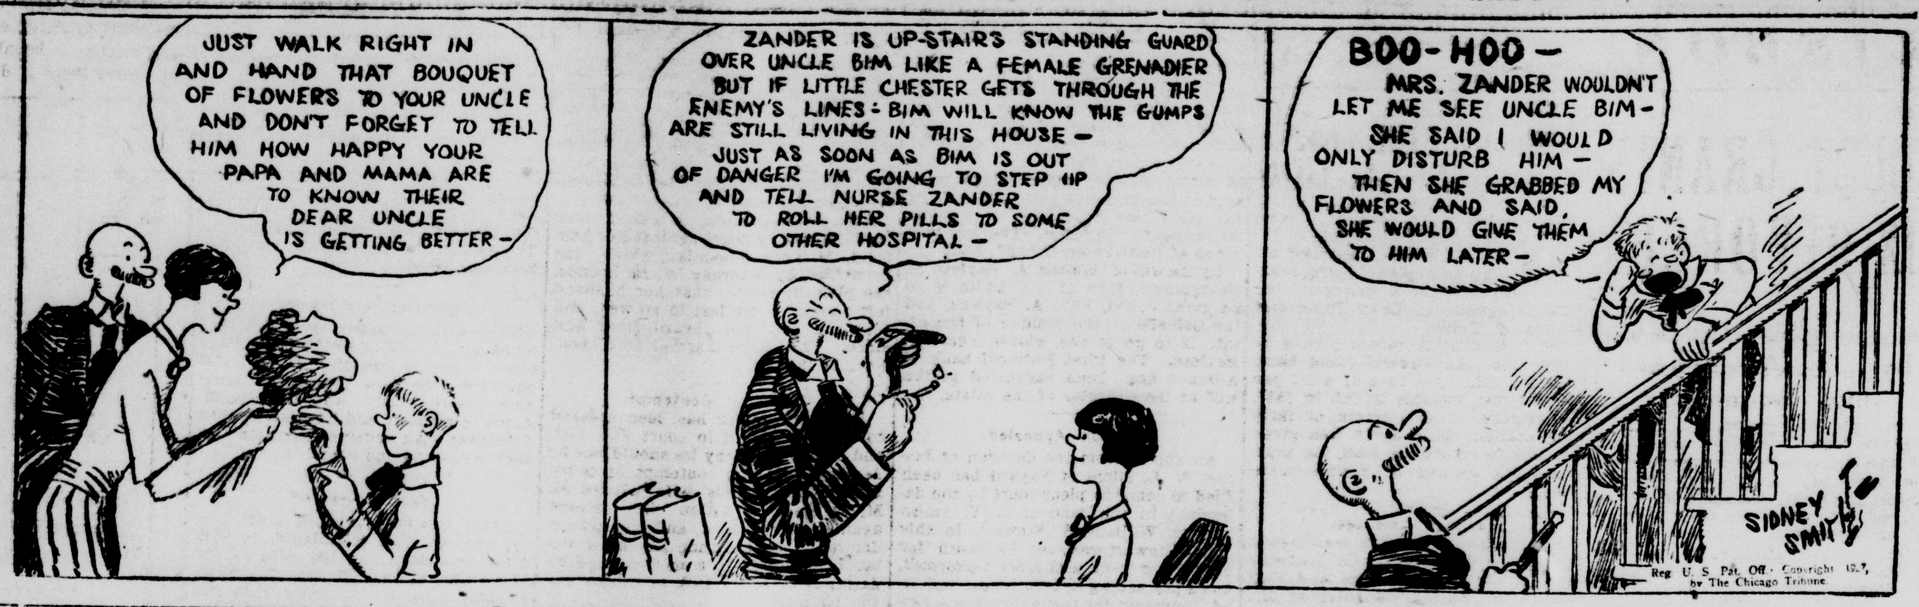

The machine will be capable of grinding to pieces 20 foot columns, 27 inches square. It will be twice as large as any similar machine now functioning.

"The public is demanding buildings at lower cost," declared Prof. Raymond H. Danforth, head of the department of hydraulics and mechanics, who will have charge of the new machine.

"Costs can be safely lowered only when we have facilities for testing the strength of parts."

Eight brides and eight bridegrooms were married simultaneously while many bridesmaids waited behind them in the Church of St. George the Martyr, Southwark, England, recently.

Dear Friends:

I notice that lots of men prefer wrist watches. Got used to them during the war.

Mr. Reese says when a man once gets used to the convenience of a wrist watch, he isn't satisfied with any other kind. A simple twist of the wrist and you've got the time of day.

I asked the boss a few minutes ago what a wrist watch costs. He says, "What does a house cost?" I says, "Different prices, I suppose." And he says, "Same with wrist watches."

They have them here at the store from $12.00 to $75.00—Illinois, Gruen Elgin, etc.

I know a lady that bought her husband a wrist watch from Mr. Reese and he sure was pleased.

Think that over, ladies.

Dear Friends:

I notice that lots of men prefer wrist watches. Got used to them during the war.

Mr. Reese says when a man once gets used to the convenience of a wrist watch, he isn't satisfied with any other kind. A simple twist of the wrist and you've got the time of day.

High School Passers Hand Bellaire Second Lacing, 43-41

Contest Clinched In Third Quarter; Play Akron Tonight

Both Teams Lay Down Heavy Barrage of Scoring With Blue and White Quint Reaching Peak Form After Passing Half Way Post.

BELLAIRE, Feb. 5.—For the second time this season, Bellaire high basketeers succumbed before the smooth-working East Liverpool high five when they dropped a 43-41 contest on the new Bellaire floor last night. Field goals were hooped with machine gun rapidity and when the smoke cleared the Red and Black found themselves holding the short end.

In valley circles Bellaire is undefeated, the Red and Blacks' only two losses having been inflicted by last night's invades. Several weeks ago East Liverpool took the measure of Coach Lewis' men at East Liverpool by a 42 to 31 score, and the game last night was advertised as a revenge performance with the word "scoring," however, having been substituted for "revenge," without any formal notice of such a last-minute change in the program.

Fans who packed the Bellaire auditorium were treated to a hectic struggle, in which players on both teams ran themselves dizzy popping goals and scorers sustained numb fingers in counting them up. A total of 32 field goals were swished through the basket, 16 by each team.

East Liverpool came out on top through superior ability at the gift line. The winners converted 11 out of 18 while the Lewismen did no better than 9 out of 21 attempts.

The invaders hopped out at a 16 to 5 lead in the first quarter. Kreiter, Bellaire ace, came to life in the second period and, aided considerably by Raiston, staged a stampede that put the Red and Black in the lead at half time, 21 to 18.

What happened in the East Liverpool dressing rooms during the intermission may forever remain a mystery, but the fact stands that the visitors tallied 15 points to Bellaire's two in the third quarter and assumed a healthy 33 to 26 lead. The charm passed in the last period and Bellaire outscored the winners 18 to 10 but the spurt accomplished little more than closing a big gap and adding excitement to a game already heavily laden with excitement.

Kreiter, with 8 field goals and 5 out of 8 fouls, was high scorer for the evening. Hamilton, for East Liverpool, tossed 6 two-pointers and made 5 out of 6 fouls, while McKeever, also a visitor, looped 5 goals and one foul. Ralston tallied 4 field goals for Bellaire, and Larkins tacked on 3 field goals and 3 fouls out of as many attempts for East Liverpool.

ANOTHER COACH AT NORTHWESTERN

EVANSTON, Ill., Feb. 5. — James Phelan, head football coach at Purdue university, is the latest gridiron mentor selected by Dame Rumor to succeed Glen Thistlethwaite, at Northwestern university.

Phelan's presence here, admittedly to confer with K. L. Wilson, Northwestern's director of athletics, has set the gossip pot to boiling as it boiled before over Dr. Spears of Minnesota and others.

Wilson said he had not talked to Phelan, but would be glad to do so. The Purdue mentor is said to be considering a similar job at the University of Texas. He plans to leave for Austin in a day or two. Phelan is reported to have confided that he is not exactly satisfied in his present position at Purdue.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans.

It should be obvious that for the pitched ball that is to stop when it strikes the ground the clubhead should go well under the ball as it strikes, because no topped or half-topped ball will ever stop. To get this effect it is not necessary to make the clubhead dig into the turf. Instead, just let your arms go out freely toward the ball in the forward swing, the head meantime holding still. The reason so many golfers lean forward while hitting is because they do not let the arms reach out toward the ball. There should be a distinct feeling that you are throwing both your hands directly at the ball and yet there should be not the slightest inclination to throw the body that way—just the arms and hands. You can merely stand still without a club, and throw your arms that way. This produces the whip-cracking effect we talk about, but if you throw the body, or lean forward and push with the body, all this arm-throwing effect is lost.

ROSENBERG WINS SCRAP BUT LOSES TITLE

CHESTER LICKS GENEVA FROSH ON PARK COURT

Field Goal by Miller in Last Second Wins Contest.

COACH RAY WILDE'S faith in his Chester high school basketball squad was vindicated last night when the Hancock countians, defeated early in the season by the Geneva college Freshmen, took the measure of the Pennsylvanians, 24-23, in the fastest cage exhibition of the season on the Rock Springs park court. Miller tossing in the winning field goal as the timer fired that shot that ended the contest.

Wilde's youngsters employed a short passing system designed to push the ball up under the basket for short range shots while the visitors took plenty of chances from mid-floor. Both threw up strong five-man defense formations.

The game, from a scoring standpoint, developed chiefly into a duel between Simcox, of Chester, and Luke, of Geneva, and when the smoke had cleared away Wilde's star emerged with a two-point lead over his rival although field goal honors were even, each sinking seven double deckers. Simcox, however, registered three free line attempts, making his total 17 points, over three-fourths of his team's total scoring.

Luke contributed some of the most spectacular shooting of the year on the Chester court, six of his seven field goals being engineered from the middle of the floor.

Wilde's youngsters played rings around the visitors in the first and second periods but Geneva came back in the concluding half and made things hot for the home crew. Chester's marksmanship was less effective in the third and fourth periods.

Chester had accumulated a six-point lead in the first half fighting but this began to melt away as Luke found the hoop for repeated field goals after the third period had gotten well under way.

The Genevans, as a result of their efforts in the third quarter, held the big end of a 21-20 count when the final canto was launched. Center Dinney boosted it two more points on a nice shot from mid-floor. Simcox kept Chester in the running with a toss from center. With a few minutes of play remaining both teams began to take long chances. As the second hand of the timer's clock reached the zero hour, Miller looped one in for a field goal and the point that made the verdict satisfactory to the jury of several hundred Chesterites who saw the contest.

In the preliminary game the Chester girls defeated the East Liverpool M. P. church sextet by a score of 36 to 15. The Chester lassies led, 29 to 4, at the half. The visitors improved in the second half and outscored the home girls in the last two periods but their efforts were insufficient to cut down the big lead amassed in the first two paragraphs.

KLINCK'S QUINT COPS CONTEST AT CARROLLTON

Foul Shot by Guard Buckley Gives Wellsville Victory.

ALTHOUGH hampered to a considerable extent by the small caged floor, Coach Klinck's Wellsville high school five last night defeated Carrollton, at Carrollton, by a count of 19 to 18, Guard Buckley tossing in the point that put the game on the right side of the ledger for the Orange and Black.

The visitors were out in front all the way, but the margin was no more than four points at any stage of the game, and in the final few minutes dwindled away to nothing at all.

Klinck's crew tossed a foul for the only point made by either team in the opening period, the tally standing 1 to 0 at the first intermission.

In the second quarter, Calhoun and his mates rann up nine points and the Carrollton five also broke the ice-collecting an even half dozen points before the half closed.

Five more points were attached to the scoring in the third period, Wellsville retaining the lead, 12 to 9.

Klinck's proteges then boosted their count to 18 before the home lads got started in the final quarter, but here they struck a snag and Carrollton began to climb. With 40 seconds of play remaining, Carrollton dropped in two field goals, changing the score from 18 to 14 to 18-all.

Then Guard Buckley came to the rescue with a foul attempt which he made good for the deciding point.

Both East Palestine teams will be in action tonight on the Wellsville court, the girls' preliminary starting at 7:30.

LEAGUE RIVALS IN TITLE CLASH

Sunday School Teams Play For First Half Honors.

Defeating the Christian church passers by the lop sided count of 60 to 26 last night on the M. E. court the Methodists went into a tie with the Methodists Protestants for first place in the Sunday school circuit and the two rivals will fight it out tonight at the Y. M. C. A. in the final game for the first half championship.

Small, Dyke and McVey put over a field goal barrage on the Christians that had the College street combine groggy before the contest was well under way. McVey hooped the leather 10 times, and Small and Dyke contributed six field goals apiece.

Lindell and Wright, with four double deckers apiece, led the losers.

The Lutherans and Baptists will clash tonight at 7:30 in a preliminary to the title scrap.

Immeditesly before cage hostilities commence, team managers and representatives will hold a meeting, the session being billed for 7 o'clock.

PURSE IS HELD UP BY STATE RING RULERS

Scales 4½ Pounds Overweight for Bout With Graham.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Charley Phil Rosenberg, fistiana's favorite bad boy today was sans title, money, credibality and, in fact, everything except the right to breathe, in consequence of a wholly synthetic bantamweight championship bout with Bushey Graham at Madison Square Garden last night. True, Rosenberg took the decision by a large majority at the end of fifteen rounds but that was ordained when he stepped on the scales 4½ pounds overweight in the afternoon.

By gong time, Rosenberg looked the part of a reasonably promising featherweight. Graham, meantime, remained a reasonably promising bantamweight and never the twain should meet. But they did, probably for the sake of getting something out of the way. One is justified in suspecting that the something in question was and is Charley Phil Rosenberg.

For things began to happen to Charles Philip with great and unpleasant rapidity as soon as he stepped from the scales. First off, his bantamweight title was declared vacated, leaving last night's affair the status of a championship only in the event that Graham won. It would appear to have been a bad break for Charles Philip that Graham didn't.

Hold on Purse.

The clarion tones of the official verdict still were echoing through the garden when our irate boxing commission, having shorn the young man of his title, rose up as one man to declare his wage in escrew, which is a monogramed way of saying that he didn't get it.

Next, with one mighty sweep of the official arm, they declared Charley Phil Rosenberg suspended indefinitely.

The boy friend thus is ruled off the turf in all states where the art of legalized boxing is plied, the National Boxing association having barred him for life. Just how long that will be may depend on the supply and demand in the ribbon counter profession. Even a bantamweight must eat.

It is the general impression that Rosenberg got a title out of practice in the gustatory line during his efforts to train off something that nature insisted on preserving. In fact, it was only during the last two days, when Rosenberg realized that his fight against weight was a losing one, that he regained some degree of his old familiarity with a knife and fork. He weighed 121 pounds for the commission's deputies on Wednesday but 122½ pounds for the commission's scales yesterday afternoon and it was this evasion of ethics that promoted much of the commissioners' ire. They apparently felt that he should have hewed to the sping, let the pounds fall where they might.

Attempt to Influence Odds.

The thing was looked upon as a bold attempt to influence the betting odds for a clean up, and was so hailed in some quarters, but if such was the project, it failed from first to last.

The high cost of living has hit the elephant market, and prices of the huge beasts have risen to $3,000 a ton, f. o. b., Europe, says the announcement made recently by a famous dealer in wild animals.

High School Passers Hand Bellaire Second Lacing, 43-41

Contest Clinched In Third Quarter; Play Akron Tonight

Both Teams Lay Down Heavy Barrage of Scoring With Blue and White Quint Reaching Peak Form After Passing Half Way Post.

BELLAIRE, Feb. 5.—For the second time this season, Bellaire high basketeers succumbed before the smooth-working East Liverpool high five when they dropped a 43-41 contest on the new Bellaire floor last night. Field goals were hooped with machine gun rapidity and when the smoke cleared the Red and Black found themselves holding the short end.

In valley circles Bellaire is undefeated, the Red and Blacks' only two losses having been inflicted by last night's invades. Several weeks ago East Liverpool took the measure of Coach Lewis' men at East Liverpool by a 42 to 31 score, and the game last night was advertised as a revenge performance with the word "scoring," however, having been substituted for "revenge," without any formal notice of such a last-minute change in the program.

Fans who packed the Bellaire auditorium were treated to a hectic struggle, in which players on both teams ran themselves dizzy popping goals and scorers sustained numb fingers in counting them up. A total of 32 field goals were swished through the basket, 16 by each team.

East Liverpool came out on top through superior ability at the gift line. The winners converted 11 out of 18 while the Lewismen did no better than 9 out of 21 attempts.

The invaders hopped out at a 10 to 5 lead in the first quarter. Kreiter, Bellaire ace, came to life in the second period and, aided considerably by Ralston, staged a stampede that put the Red and Black in the lead at half time, 21 to 18.

What happened in the East Liverpool dressing rooms during the intermission may forever remain a mystery, but the fact stands that the visitors tallied 15 points to Bellaire's two in the third quarter and assumed a healthy 33 to 26 lead. The charm passed in the last period and Bellaire outscored the winners 18 to 10 but the spurt accomplished little more than closing a big gap and adding excitement to a game already heavily laden with excitement.

Kreiter, with 8 field goals and 5 out of 8 fouls, was high scorer for the evening. Hamilton, for East Liverpool, tossed 6 two-pointers and made 5 out of 6 fouls, while McKeever, also a visitor, looped 5 goals and one foul. Ralston tallied 4 field goals for Bellaire, and Larkins tacked on 3 field goals and 3 fouls out of as many attempts for East Liverpool.

ANOTHER COACH AT NORTHWESTERN

EVANSTON, Ill., Feb. 5. — James Phelan, head football coach at Purdue university, is the latest gridiron mentor selected by Dame Rumor to succeed Glen Thistlethwaite, at Northwestern university.

Phelan's presence here, admittedly to confer with K. L. Wilson, Northwestern's director of athletics, has set the gossip pot to boiling as it boiled before over Dr. Spears of Minnesota and others.

Wilson said he had not talked to Phelan, but would be glad to do so. The Purdue mentor is said to be considering a similar job at the University of Texas. He plans to leave for Austin in a day or two. Phelan is reported to have confided that he is not exactly satisfied in his present position at Purdue.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans.

It should be obvious that for the pitched ball that is to stop when it strikes the ground the clubhead should go well under the ball as it strikes, because no topped or half-topped ball will ever stop. To get this effect it is not necessary to make the clubhead dig into the turf. Instead, just let your arms go out freely toward the ball in the forward swing, the head meantime holding still. The reason so many golfers lean forward while hitting is because they do not let the arms reach out toward the ball. There should be a distinct feeling that you are throwing both your hands directly at the ball and yet there should be not the slightest inclination to throw the body that way—just the arms and hands. You can merely stand still without a club, and throw your arms that way. This produces the whip-cracking effect we talk about, but if you throw the body, or lean forward and push with the body, all this arm-throwing effect is lost.

ROSENBERG WINS SCRAP BUT LOSES TITLE

CHESTER LICKS GENEVA FROSH ON PARK COURT

Field Goal by Miller in Last Second Wins Contest.

COACH RAY WILDE'S faith in his Chester high school basketball squad was vindicated last night when the Hancock countians, defeated early in the season by the Geneva college Freshmen, took the measure of the Pennsylvanians, 24-23, in the fastest cage exhibition of the season on the Rock Springs park court, Miller tossing in the winning field goal as the timer fired that shot that ended the contest.

Wilde's youngsters employed a short passing system designed to push the ball up under the basket for short range shots while the visitors took plenty of chances from mid-floor. Both threw up strong five-man defense formations.

The game, from a scoring standpoint, developed chiefly into a duel between Simcox, of Chester, and Luke, of Geneva, and when the smoke had cleared away Wilde's star emerged with a two-point lead over his rival although field goal honors were even, each sinking seven double deckers. Simcox, however, registered three free line attempts, making his total 17 points, over three-fourths of his team's total scoring.

Luke contributed some of the most spectacular shooting of the year on the Chester court, six of his seven field goals being engineered from the middle of the floor.

Wilde's youngsters played rings around the visitors in the first and second periods but Geneva came back in the concluding half and made things hot for the home crew. Chester's marksmanship was less effective in the third and fourth periods.

Chester had accumulated a six-point lead in the first half fighting but this began to melt away as Luke found the hoop for repeated field goals after the third period had gotten well under way.

The Genevans, as a result of their efforts in the third quarter, held the big end of a 21-20 count when the final canto was launched. Center Dinney boosted it two more points on a nice shot from mid-floor. Simcox kept Chester in the running with a toss from center. With a few minutes of play remaining both teams began to take long chances. As the second hand of the timer's clock reached the zero hour, Miller looped one in for a field goal and the point that made the verdict satisfactory to the jury of several hundred Chesterites who saw the contest.

In the preliminary game the Chester girls defeated the East Liverpool M. P. church sextet by a score of 36 to 15. The Chester lassies led, 29 to 4, at the half. The visitors improved in the second half and outscored the home girls in the last two periods but their efforts were insufficient to cut down the big lead amassed in the first two paragraphs.

The addition of Tris Speaker as a regular outfielder and manager Harris' desire to develop Bob McCann, a recruit from Columbus, as an understudy first sacker, made Harris surplus on the Senators' roster.

KLINCK'S QUINT COPS CONTEST AT CARROLLTON

Foul Shot by Guard Buckley Gives Wellsville Victory.

ALTHOUGH hampered to a considerable extent by the small caged floor, Coach Klinck's Wellsville high school five last night defeated Carrollton, at Carrollton, by a count of 19 to 18, Guard Buckley tossing in the point that put the game on the right side of the ledger for the Orange and Black.

The visitors were out in front all the way, but the margin was no more than four points at any stage of the game, and in the final few minutes dwindled away to nothing at all.

Klinck's crew tossed a foul for the only point made by either team in the opening period, the tally standing 1 to 0 at the first intermission.

In the second quarter, Calhoun and his mates rann up nine points and the Carrollton five also broke the ice, collecting an even half dozen points before the half closed.

Five more points were attached to the scoring in the third period, Wellsville retaining the lead, 12 to 9.

Klinck's proteges then boosted their count to 18 before the home lads got started in the final quarter, but here they struck a snag and Carrollton began to climb. With 40 seconds of play remaining, Carrollton dropped in two field goals, changing the score from 18 to 14 to 18-all.

Then Guard Buckley came to the rescue with a foul attempt which he made good for the deciding point.

Both East Palestine teams will be in action tonight on the Wellsville court, the girls' preliminary starting at 7:30.

MEN AND BOYS HEAR SERMON BY DR. KNAPP

Some Church Members Like Tombstones, Says Evangelist.

HITS VIEWPOINT

Special Services at Methodist Protestant Church.

"Some church members remind me of tombstones without inscriptions" affirmed Dr. W. A. Knapp at the Methodist Protestant revival last evening. "They have lost their spirituality. They do not feel God and are given to formality of religion in this age of superficiality. Were they to have the right viewpoint of the Almighty it would be an easy matter to lead men and women to Christ."

Men, accompanied by numerous boys thronged the center aisle of the auditorium. The honor for bringing the greatest number of lads to the service went to Mont Clutter, a Sunday school teacher, who escorted 18 to the meeting. He was, as per promise, given a useful gift, a Biblical expository for weekly Bible lessons.

Announcement was made that an augmented choir of boys and girls would assist at tonight's service following a week of preparation.

A Christian Endeavor rally at 6:30 o'clock on Sunday evening, at which Endeavors all over the city and those not members will be present, will be held in the Sunday school room. Dr. Knapp, discussing special subjects, will preach twice on Sunday, at 11 a. m., and 7:30 o'clock.

The Sunday school attendance quota for tomorrow's Bible study has been set at 403 with indications of its being reached.

The invocation last evening was made by Rev. John F. Dimit, pastor of the church. Mrs. Vinaroff gave a solo on the miramba.

Preceding the sermon and following the singing of "The Ninety and Nine," Dr. Knapp told how a hardened sinner of 75 years became converted in a Nebraska revival by hearing this song sung which he had once heard as a boy in Ohio. The song proved the entering wedge. "He came to see me at the depot as I was leaving town," said the evangelist. "I told him to remain faithful a few days longer and he would be certain of reaching the celestial heights. And as I heard afterwards he passed away the following Thursday uttering as his final words the text I had used when he accepted Christ: 'Thanks be to God for His unspeakable gift.'

During the remainder of the meeting babies will be provided places in a basement when they become unruly so their mothers can continue in the services.

"We live in a day when men and women think little of religion," averred Dr. Knapp. "And yet there is no fact more established than immortality. There is nothing destroyed, only changed, in this life. So if this is true of matter, it is unthinkable that the soul shall cease living. Even though there were no future the good life is the better here and now. And thus it pays to be a Christian either way."

Dr. Knapp's text was the injunction, "Be not deceived, God is not mocked. Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

Short Talks By Thoughtful Mothers.

A Tennessse mother talks. Mrs. J. G. C. —— of Knoxville. "Another thing, everyone who has children should keep Foley's Honey and Tar Compound always on hand, for the children's cough or baby's croup. It certainly excels all other cough medicines in healing qualities and in giving quick and satisfactory results. It is made under absolutely sanitary conditions and contains no opiates—points of especial interest to mothers who want to know what they are giving their children. Our druggist also recommends it highly." Ask for it.

MEN AND BOYS HEAR SERMON BY DR. KNAPP

Some Church Members Like Tombstones, Says Evangelist.

HITS VIEWPOINT

Special Services at Methodist Protestant Church.

"Some church members remind me of tombstones without inscriptions" affirmed Dr. W. A. Knapp at the Methodist Protestant revival last evening. "They have lost their spirituality. They do not feel God and are given to formality of religion in this age of superficiality. Were they to have the right viewpoint of the Almighty it would be an easy matter to lead men and women to Christ."

Men, accompanied by numerous boys thronged the center aisle of the auditorium. The honor for bringing the greatest number of lads to the service went to Mont Clutter, a Sunday school teacher, who escorted 18 to the meeting. He was, as per promise, given a useful gift, a Biblical expository for weekly Bible lessons.

Announcement was made that an augmented choir of boys and girls would assist at tonight's service following a week of preparation.

A Christian Endeavor rally at 6:30 o'clock on Sunday evening, at which Endeavors all over the city and those not members will be present, will be held in the Sunday school room. Dr. Knapp, discussing special subjects, will preach twice on Sunday, at 11 a. m., and 7:30 o'clock.

The Sunday school attendance quota for tomorrow's Bible study has been set at 403 with indications of its being reached.

The invocation last evening was made by Rev. John F. Dimit, pastor of the church. Mrs. Vinaroff gave a solo on the miramba.

Preceding the sermon and following the singing of "The Ninety and Nine," Dr. Knapp told how a hardened sinner of 75 years became converted in a Nebraska revival by hearing this song sung which he had once heard as a boy in Ohio. The song proved the entering wedge. "He came to see me at the depot as I was leaving town," said the evangelist. "I told him to remain faithful a few days longer and he would be certain of reaching the celestial heights. And as I heard afterwards he passed away the following Thursday uttering as his final words the text I had used when he accepted Christ: 'Thanks be to God for His unspeakable gift.'

During the remainder of the meeting babies will be provided places in a basement when they become unruly so their mothers can continue in the services.

"We live in a day when men and women think little of religion," averred Dr. Knapp. "And yet there is no fact more established than immortality. There is nothing destroyed, only changed, in this life. So if this is true of matter, it is unthinkable that the soul shall cease living. Even though there were no future the good life is the better here and now. And thus it pays to be a Christian either way."

Dr. Knapp's text was the injunction, "Be not deceived, God is not mocked. Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

Short Talks By Thoughtful Mothers.

A Tennessse mother talks. Mrs. J. G. C. ——— of Knoxville. "Another thing, everyone who has children should keep Foley's Honey and Tar Compound always on hand, for the children's cough or baby's croup. It certainly excels all other cough medicines in healing qualities and in giving quick and satisfactory results. It is made under absolutely sanitary conditions and contains no opiates—points of especial interest to mothers who want to know what they are giving their children. Our druggist also recommends it highly." Ask for it.

MISSING WOMAN BEING SOUGHT

County Authorities Join Search for Brooke County Resident.

A search for Mrs. Ota Dare, 47, of Beech Bottom, who has been missing since early Thursday morning, has been extended throughout the tri-state district. The Ohio river in the vicinity of Beech Bottom was dragged yesterday on the assumption that the woman, who was last seen near the water, might have fallen in the river and been drowned.

Mrs. Dare was last seen at 9:30 o'clock Thursday morning walking toward the river from her home, county officials were informed last night. A search was instituted for her Thursday afternoon and was continued throughout the night and all day yesterday without result.

Mrs. Dare, it was said, has not been well for some time, and only recently returned from a trip to California where she had gone in the interest of her health. It is feared by her husband that she may have left home temporarily deranged because of her ailment and may have fallen into the river or have wandered a considerable distance away. Because of this he caused to be spread broadcast the news of her disappearance.

Mrs. Dare was described as being 5 feet 6 inches in height, slim, with dark hair and brown eyes, wearing a black hat and coat and a black and white dress. All her clothing was marked with her name, it was said.

WELLSBURG MAN SENT TO JAIL

Robert Gill, of Wellsburg, charged with beating a board bill and breaking and entering, was arraigned yesterday before Justice A. G. Allison. He was fined $90 or given the alternative of spending 90 days in the county jail to which place he was taken by Chief of Police William Smith.

Gill, it was testified at the hearing, accompanied by another man came here two weeks ago and on the plea that he had secured employment in a local plant was given room and lodging. Both men left the city Monday after they had broken into their rooming house and secured their clothing. Gill was arrested at Wellsburg on a warrant issued here.

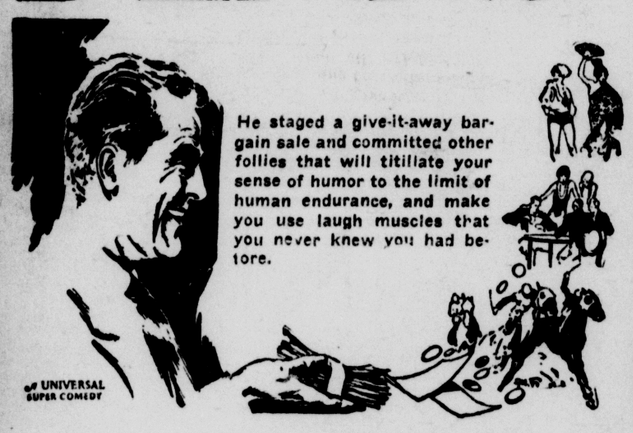

Mission Society Meets.

Missionary society of the First Christian church met last night in the church. Mrs. A. E. Sims was in charge of the meeting which was featured by a coverdish supper.

TEETH IN RELATION TO HEALTH

PERMANENT TEETH

(Editor's note—The following is the second of a series of articles on various phases of dentistry, prepared by a representative of the East Liverpool-Wellsville Dental society. Future articles will appear in Saturday editions.)

The permanent, or second teeth, are 32 in number, including the third molars, (wisdom teeth),—16 above and 16 below. The first permanent teeth to appear through the gums (erupt) are the four first molars,—one above on each side and one below on each side. These teeth erupt back of all the deciduous teeth, or "baby teeth" as they are usually called, and also before any of the deciduous teeth are normally lost, usually appearing at the age of six or seven years.

The permanent teeth commence to take their respective places in the dental arch at the age of six years and evidently they were intended to last until death, at least, but, Oh how often they are prematurely lost. The question may be reasonably asked, Why are they so frequently lost too soon? Well, it may sometimes be the fault of a careless or commercially inclined dentist, but more often it is because of neglect on the part of the owner of those teeth. It is generally presumed that it is not a common practice to wash the teeth as often as we do our hands, and yet it is altogether possible to find more kinds of disease germs on the teeth of the average person than on their hands, remembering all the time that nature made provisions for reproducing the tissues of the hands, but not so that of the teeth. Of course, we do not know just why nature supplied us with two sets of perfectly good teeth, but we do know that it is usually pretty good practice to take rather good care of whatever nature does give us. Therefore, isn't it reasonably good logic to take good care of those teeth?

We are told that, through cell reproduction, the various tissues of the body are replaced once every seven years, but it is a well-known fact that the teeth are the only exeception to this law of nature, because the teeth are replaced once, and only once, for all time, naturally, and it is very generally conceded by all competent investigators that the loss of all the permanent teeth materially shortens the life of that respective individual in relation to what it would be if they had good natural teeth, even though they may have servicable substitutes. To be sure, no plea whatever is herein intended for the retention in the mouth of diseased or defective tooth conditions which are not only a menace to, but, most certainly, a preventive of good health. The idea intended to be stressed here is that we should be very careful to keep our teeth clean and free from all defects, thereby not only preventing pain, but will preserve them for the purposes manifestly intended by nature.

MAN ARRESTED ON OLD CHARGE

Seven years ago Metar Turodevich, of Weirton, and Mike Meyers, of Weirton, engaged in a fight at a camp near Holliday's Cove. Yesterday a warrant, charging Turodevich with cutting with intent to kill was served. He is awaiting arraignment at the Weirton jail.

The accused man, jailed by Weirton city police and Hancock county officers is said to have been employed at the Folio camp, along with Meyers. An argument which arose in the course of the day's work ended in a fight in which Turodevich is alleged to have drawn a knife and severely wounded Meyers with the weapon. The alleged assailant fled. Meyers lay at a hospital for weeks as a result, it is said, the wound proving all but fatal.

Turodevich is said to have made his home in another state since that time, returning to Weirton Thursday where he was recognized with the result the old charge was rested against him and he was jailed.

FARM RELIEF BEGINS AT HOME, SAYS EXPERT, EXPLAINING HOW

By Charles P. Stewart.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—"Farm relief begins at home," observed Roger I. Sherman, food expert, who has had a good deal to say concerning much of the proposed agricultural legislation congress has been mulling over in recent weeks.

ROGER I SHERMAN

Sherman has been in the canning and packing business for years. He was a side kick of Uncle Joe Cannon. He put Porto Rican fruit raising on a paying basis by teaching the islanders how to utilize their previous waste products. Territorial Delegate Sutherland consults him as to the market's possibilities for the Alaskan salmon catch. He went to France to show the United States commissariat how to make the soldiers' grub taste good. He advises with Secretary of Agriculture Pardine. He's mentioned as the United States' first minister to Canada, because of the reputation he has for creating an American demand for Canadian blueberries. He stirred up a sugar scandal.

If there's anything edible, he has a finger in it.

He's here, there and everywhere and he spends considerable time in Washington.

"The farmer who produces an extra-super quality of anything never has any surplus," continued Sherman.

"If he sorted out his best stuff, he'd sell it all at top prices. But he can't resist the temptation to mix in his inferior grades, so's to get fancy figures for the whole thing. It doesn't work out that way. Instead of getting high prices for everything, because it's a partly superior quality, he gets low prices for everything because it's partly inferior quality.

"The first lesson in farm co-operation is:

"There's no limit to the demand for the best. Keep the poorer part of the yield separate and sell it as second grade. It won't bring so much. That can't be expected. But the high price for the first grade will ofset the lower price for the poorer grade.

"That's the way to take care of the surplus they holler so much about."

The farmer's got to have credit," agreed Sherman. "He mustn't be forced to unload at the worst time.

"He ought to be able to borrow his crop's full value when he harvests it. Then his bank can't afford to have him sold out at slump prices, for the benefit of speculators, who mean to hang on for the next rise. On that basis, the farmer doesn't have to sell until he gets ready, anyway.

"If the farmer's bank won't do this for him, the government ought to.

"Brainy farming, community warehouses and credit, I tell you—that's agricultural co-operation."

"I don't forget the consumer," added the food man.

"He's entitled to carload rates.

"The big dealer gets his stuff by the carload. The little one gets small jags. Of course they cost him more.

"What does the big chap do? He buys good goods, but not quite A-1 Then he puts on his own labels and sells slightly inferior stuff as first quality, saying he can cut prices because he buys in quantity. But really he pockets the rake-off from his carload freight rates.

"The little guy has to buy top grade stuff for the sake of top grade labels and his freight costs him more. Naturally, he's undersold by the big one.

"The consumers' stuck either way. He doesn't get the goods he thinks he's buying, or he does get 'em, but they cost him too much.

"The little dealers' game is to co-operate, too—get together, order in carload lots and have a truck to receive their carload at the railroad station and distribute it among 'em.'

"That," concluded Sherman, "is co-operation, from producer to consumer, but you'll never get the middle men to agree on it."

Spiral, Not Jagged.
Happy John Demarest.
War Mosquitoes.
Radio in Business.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

[The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune.]

THE "JAGGED" lightning, making "forks" in the sky is not jagged at all, Mr. Legg, Westinghouse engineer, shows with photographs 150 times faster than motion picture cameras, that the lightning bolt is a spiral. That interests those who know that the spiral is opposed to the circle, is the emblem of progress.

Our earth, accompanying the sun in its journey through space, travels a spiral path. The sun travels ahead toward the star Vega, we going around it, following it, taking a spiral course. You are many billions of miles from the spot in the universe where you were born, and probably never will go back.

JOHN DEMAREST died Thursday in the New Jersey house in which he was born 99 years ago. His wife, aged 96 took care of him to the last. They had been married 77 years.

On his diamond wedding day John Demarest told the world he never had anything to complain of. "We always worked hard, went to bed early, got up early, cooked our own meals, forgave each other's faults, and went to church."

And he died in the house in which he was born. How restless globe wanderers will envy that calm life.

FRANCE builds dozens of tiny airplanes, smallest in the world; every French submarine will carry one.

One of these submarine airplanes rose from the water nine seconds after the submarine reached the surface, went up 2,000 feet, descended and went aboard the submarine again.

A fleet of submarines coming up near a big city, discharging its swarm of mosquito like airplanes, each carrying its gas or explosive bomb, could make the next war interesting.

MR. BROWNING, elderly gentleman attracting attention in connection with "Peaches," Cinderellas and similar objects, has a new plan. There is no use trying to make "Peaches" or Cinderellas happy, they nearly always sue on.

Mr. Browning will encourage others tring to do good. His wealth, no longer used for Cinderella fur coats, or "Peaches" automobiles, will create a "do good" foundation, a combination of the Nobel prize and Y. M. C. A. It ought to work.

Thus again sorrow and disappointment produce good works.

GENERAL MOTORS Export Co. connects its branches in South Africa by radio. Each night General Motors' headquarters at Montevideo talks to agents all over South America. That is business.

As related here, Standard Oil has purchased a flying office for the use of executives, and Mr. Judson, president of Continental Motors, visits his three widely separated manufacturing plants in his flying machine in one day.

Business is more complicated than when Abraham Lincoln worked in a store.

THE GERMAN foreign office, tired of imitating Bismarck's "reptile press" methods, has sold its secretly owned Allgemeine Zeitung. A newspaper secretly owned and used for secret purposes may fool its owner, but does not fool the public. Some prosperous Americans have made that discovery.

BLAZE TRAPS TOLEDOANS IN BELFRY ATOP WORSHIP HOUSE

Incendiaries Apply Torch to Congregational Edifice.

LOSS OF $250,000

Three Others Suffocated in Flames at Quantico, Va.

TOLEDO, O., Feb. 5—Three charred bodies, their arms entwined as they faced death, were discovered in the basement of the First Congregational church which was destroyed by fire here today.

The dead:

CLYDE WILT, 52, caretaker.

MRS. KATE WILT, 47, his wife.

MRS. MARY FITZGERALD, assistant caretaker.

Trapped in Belfry.

The victims were found by firemen who searched the basement of the church which was destroyed, causing a loss of $250,000.

Police declared that the blaze had been of incendiary origin and an investigation has been ordered.

Wilt and his wife were in the belfry of the famous institution when Mrs. [illegible] raid dashed to them and shouted that the building was on fire, firemen declared.

Terror-stricken, the three trapped persons clung together until they were suffocated. The belfry collapsed casting the bodies into the basement.

Bodies Badly Burned.

Identification was made difficult by the condition of the bodies, which were badly burned.

When firemen answed the alarm they found the building beyond control from the flames. They confined their efforts to preventing spread of the fire to adjoining buildings, it being believed that no one was within the church.

Relatives of the Wilt family later reported the absence of the three and

CANTONESE ADVANCE ON SHANGHAI

HOLES ARE PUNCHED IN SUN CHUAN FANG'S LINES IN BIG DRIVE

Although Admitting he Has Suffered Severe Reverses, Sun Chuan Fang's Supporters Claim That His Retreat Has Been Partially "Strategic" to Effect Junction With Others.

DECISIVE BATTLE NEAR HANGCHOW TO SEAL INTERNATIONAL CITY'S FATE

British Cabinet Has Decided to Take no Immediate Action on Recall of Troops Now Enroute to China, While Soviet Russia Denies Any Responsibility for Cantonese Policy.

The Cantonese armies are now reported smashing through the lines of General Sun Chaun Fang, making a concerted drive for Shanghai.

Sun Chaun Fang has suffered severe reverses, but his supporters claim that his defeat has been partially "strategic" in order that he may effect a junction with reinforcements which General Wu Pei Fu is reported sending from the north.

A decisive battle may even now be in progress near Hangchow, and the issue of this battle may determine whether the Cantonese will be able to reach Shanghai.

The British cabinet has decided to take no immediate action on the recall of troops now enroute to China.

Factions within the British cabinet are reported as still being at odds over policy.

Winston Churchill and Leopold Amery have charged that Russia is backing the Anti-British movement in China.

Acting Foreign Minister Litvinoff of Soviet Russia denies any responsibility for the Cantonese policy.

America Seeks Protection Pact.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Secretary of State Kellogg has instructed John V. A. MacMurray, American minister in Ueking, to attempt to negotiate with rival Chinese military leaders an agreement to protect the international settlement in Shanghai from military violence, the state department declared today.

This government, however, is opposed to making Shanghai a neutral zone.

Fighting at Shanghai.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 5.—Hard pressed by the ever advancing Cantonese but stubbornly contesting every foot of ground, General Sun Chuan-Fang, governor of Chekiang province, still was waging a determined battle today for continued control of Shanghai, and the coveted millions of revenue collected at China's chief seaport.

Although he was reported to have been defeated in the fight yesterday in the neighborhood of Yenchow, Sun continued to resist, and today was rushing up reinforcements to bolster his faltering lines.

The outcome of the battle is of great importance to the foreign residents of Shanghai, because with the defeat of Sun Chuan-Fang the prospect of serious fighting in the vicinity of the international settlement becomes imminent.

Rioting in Tientsin.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Serious rioting in Tientsin by Chinese mobs was reported today in a Central News dispatch.

The rioting occurred in the former German concession when workers in a carpet factory objected to the dismissal of the Chinese foreman. An infuriated mob of 350 attacked the British manager of the factory and knocked him down and threatened to trample on him, and he escaped with his life by a narrow margin.

Police reinforcements were called and restored peace.

Japanese Marines to Sail.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The Japanese admiralty has ordered the cruiser Tenryo to take aboard 300 marines and proceed to Saseco with four destroyers to await orders for Shanghai, according to a dispatch to the Evening News from Tokio.

The Standard Oil company of Ohio today obtained a long term lease on a tract at the intersection of West Eights and Jefferson streets and the Horn switch on which a gasoline filling station will be erected.

The site, which is owned by the Crockery City Ice and Products company, has been used as a storage place for wagons, trucks and other equipment. The lot, almost triangular-shaped, runs about 120 feet along West Eighth street and the Horn Switch.

Clearing of fences and buildings from the site has been started. A fireproof building is to be erected on the site and equipment will include oil racks, free water and air service and modern type gasoline pumps. The company will also have siding privileges to fascilitate the unloading of gasoline from tank cars.

The proposed station is the third for which plans have been announced during the last two days. The Fisher Oil and Gas company will erect a station at Fifth street and Broadway, while the B. & W. Tire company plans one at Dresden avenue and the Horn switch.

The Standard station will be completed about April 1.

RAIDING SQUAD SEIZES STILL, MASH, LIQUOR IN FARM VISIT

Sheriff Wright and Aides Search Unoccupied House.

WRECK EQUIPMENT

Authorities Say Lash Tucker May Face Another Charge.

As an aftermath of the arrest of Lash Tucker, Liverpool township resident, upon a charge of transporting liquor, Sheriff George Wright, accompanied by Deputy Lawrence Kindsvatter and Constable Clarence Wetzel, raided an unoccupied house on what is known as the Hays farm, two miles southeast of Lisbon, last night.

In the cellar of the house, the raiders seized a 50-gallon still, equipped with gas burners, gasoline tank and other accessories used in the manufacture of liquor; 14 barrels of mash, 250 pounds of sugar, one gallon of finished liquor, a .38 caliber Colt revolver, tools, lanterns and other equipment. The authorities also found in the house a Chicago mail order catalogue, addressed to Tucker, Sheriff Wright said.

A farm wagon was engaged and the still and other equipment removed to the county jail at Lisbon after the mash had been destroyed. County authorities said today that another charge of manufacturing liquor may be filed against Tucker as a result of the second raid.

Tucker is being held in the county jail for non-payment of a fine of $1,000 and costs assessed against him by Probate Judge Lodge Riddle yesterday afternoon upon a liquor charge. Tucker was arrested when his automobile became stalled in the mud as he was leaving a Lincoln Highway tourist camp, Thursday night, 14 gallons of liquor being found in his machine.

Before being taken before Judge Riddle, Tucker was arraigned before Justice M. K. Zimmerman on a charge of receiving stolen property in the connection with the theft of ware valued at $84.24 from the No. 2 plant of the Homer Laughlin China company last November. He pleaded not guilty to the charge and was held for a hearing next Monday. His bond has been fixed at $1,000.

C. & P. VETERAN ON HONOR ROLL

Barnett Burlingame Retires After 43 Years Service.

Barnett Burlingham, veteran Cleveland & Pittsburgh division employe, was retired this week to the Pennsylvania Honor Roll after 43 years of railroad service.

At the age of 12, he took employment as a section hand on the Mahoning division of the old L. S. & M. S. R. R. The following year, Mr. Burlingham left home and located in Cleveland, where he worked in a stove factory operated by Roberts & Reed. He remained at those duties until 1877, at which time he took employment on the Erie Railroad as a brakeman, remaining there until 1884. About this time he sought employment with the Pennsylvania railroad and was hired by George Skinner, then general yardmaster at Cleveland Union Station.

Mr. Burlingham states he served 30 days (without pay) learning the road, and made his first day April 15, with Conductor J. Mumford, working from Cleveland to Wellsville, which took 36 hours. For this service he received the sum of $1.50, payment for overtime in those days being unknown.

Mr. Burlingham worked as a brakeman for eight months and was then made general yard clerk at Wellsville Shop, with Theodore Starrett, where he stayed six months, at which time he made request to go back on the road and was assigned as a passenger brakeman between Wellsville and Pittsburgh. Subsequently, he was promoted to conductor on December 8, 1886, making his first freight run between Wellsville and Cleveland, December 20, on what was known as No. 11, his first engineman being George Carson.

On December 1, 1900, Burlingham was promoted to passenger conductor, making his run on No. 11 between Pittsburgh and Cleveland in place of Charles Zimmerman. His first regular passenger run he obtained in 1905, taking the place of Thomas Kerr on the run known as "The Growler," and operating between Wellsville and Bellaire.

Burlingham came to Cleveland in 1907, taking a run operating between that point and Pittsburgh and made his last passenger run on January 6, 1925, from Pittsburgh to Cleveland on the same train on which he made his first run after being promoted to a passenger conductor.

Owing to defective eyesight, it was necessary for him to retire from active duty and today he enters the ranks of those faithful employes whose names appear on the Pennsylvania "Roll of Honor."

Mr. Burlingham states that in the 43 years of service he never missed a call or was never late for a run. He served but one suspension, for which he later was exonerated.

BANK OFFICIALS FINED BY COURT

Thomas S. Jones, vice president of the defunct Yorkville Union Savings bank, was fined $5,000 and given a suspended indeterminate sentence in the Ohio penitentiary when arraigned before Common Pleas Judge Charles Turnbaugh in Steubenville yesterday.

Jones had pleaded guilty to a charge of aiding and abetting the issuance of a fraudulent certificate of deposit.

W. E. Jones, cashier of the same bank, entered a plea of guilty to issuing a fraudulent certificate and was fined $1,500 and given a suspended indeterminate sentence in the Ohio reformatory.

W. B. Francis, Martins Ferry, and John G. Belknap, Steubenville, were acquitted by a jury last week on similar charges and the verdict was the basis of pleas for leniency for the two Jones.

BOOTLEGGERS complain that business is almost ruined by heavy expenses. Testimony sworn, in New Jersey, shows that to land one bootleg cargo it was necessary to bribe the mayor, chief of police, two detectives, a police sergeant from another city, customs inspector and dock owner.

Twenty men in all got so much a case before the bootleg poison reached the consumer. No wonder it is expensive.

CHAPTER 32.

"So," he said, "Alexis has found his way here. We have been looking for him," and, bending over the writhing man, he applied the stethoscope to his heart and lungs.

Then he turned to me.

"You have been privileged to witness," he said in French, "a most interesting phenomenon."

'Pardon me," I interrupted, "but is this part of your duties as a butler?"

"I am not a butler," he replied, drawing himself up, a flush of humiliation staining his broad cheeks. "I am Doctor Kuntz. "I only act as a butler in deference to the wishes of the Center."

"Is this unhappy creature one of your patients?" I inquired.

"He is," replied Doctor Kuntz, "and you have been privileged to witness a person under the influence of repeated doses of cocaine, a cocaine-maniac, in fact, near the final stage."

"You will see the others presently," he continued, looking at me with a malevolent smile. "In fact, you will get to know them quite well in the course of the next few days. Meanwhile, I will have Alexis removed. Please note that you are free to go about as you please in this wing of the house, and downstairs you will find a sitting room and a dining room. I do not think it will be necessary to introduce you to any of your fellow guests. Their names are of little consequence, and you will find that they are prepared to dispense with the formality of an introduction."

He turned and left the room, and a few moments later two Japanese attendants entered, bearing a stretcher. They lifted Alexis, who had relapsed again into a state of coma, and laid him without ceremony upon it. One of them turned to me and said:

"Breakfast is in large room downstairs. First turn to right."

When they had gone I made shift to dress. I noted with satisfaction that I had been provided with shaving materials, and with these I removed a three days' growth of beard on my lips and chin, trying as best I could to keep my mind from dwelling on the horrors which I had just witnessed.

In about ten minutes I left my bedroom and, following the directions of the servant I soon found myself downstairs and in a fair-sized room, white like the rest of the house, and very plainly furnished, with a marble-topped table and several hard chairs. On the table was a pot of coffee, a roll of bread and several cups. I poured out a cup of cofee, but on tasting it found it was cold.

I looked in vain for a means of acquainting the servants with this fact, but seeing none, was obliged to make shift with what I found. There was a strange, close smell in the room, due to the fact that the windows had not been open for some considerable time, as I soon proved, for they resisted all my efforts to unlatch them.

Having made my meal, I resolved to continue my explorations. Opening out of the dining room was a salon or living room. I pushed open the door and entered.

There were some dozen to twenty persons present. Some were chattering freely as I arrived, but they ceased talking the moment they caught sight of me and looked at me with suspicion. There were several men, but the women were in a majority. One of the men must have been fifty or possibly older. He had a sallow, lined face, covered with deep wrinkles. Another was a mere lad, possessed of a hacking cough which shook his thin frame cruelly from time to time. His eyes shone brilliantly, and his general aspect was feverish in the extreme.

Of the women two were quite young, one well past her youth, and a fourth of middle age. They were none of them fully dressed, but wore soiled wraps or loose gowns. Two of them had not even troubled to do up their hair. The men were unshaven and they all had an air of slovenly disorder. Another thing they most of them had in common, except a couple, man and woman, who lay inertly upon a divan at the far end of the room: they were restless in their movements; none of them was still for a moment, but walked nervously to and fro, or had some physical twitch which they were quite unable to control.

My sudden entry produced, as I have said, something like a sensation, and the strange company, with the exception of the couple on the divan, turned with one accord and fixed me with surprised glances. I took a few steps fotward and stopped short, regarding them more closely. Some of them refused to meet my eyes and shuffled their feet like small children detected in the commission of some trivial fault; I turned todays one of the women—the younger, a haggard blonde—she shrank up close to her neighbor, a middle-aged woman, who, to judge from the appearance of her raddled cheeks, had recently been weeping.

"Who is he, Mina?" she said hoarsely. "He is not one of us; he's a stranger."

There was a clamor of voices behind me, and turning I saw that a group of men who had for a moment ceased their conversation were again talking among themselves. One of them, a young man with long hair and a flowing tie, was expounding some system of philosophy which the others were vividly contesting. All were talking at once with an amazing rapidity and assurance.

I had little leisure, however, to observe them, or to catch the drift of their discourse, for I was suddenly aware of the woman, Mina, who had come towards men and was looking closely into my face with an expression of wry distaste.

"Why can't you leave us alone?" she said, in the same rustling whisper which I had noted before in Alexis. "This is no place for strangers."

I looked at her in compassion rather than disgust, appalled by her haunted eyes and a certain dreadful indecision that lurked in them even as she so insolently addressed me.

"Madam," I began, but at that instant the young girl, her companion, interposed rapidly between us.

"Mina," she rasped, "why are you talking to this man? I won't have it. Every one is false and hateful. I detest you all?"

And suddenly, without a word of warning, she struck me violently in the face.

I realized that all these people were under the same dreadful influence as the wretched Alexis and was prepared for almost any eccentricity, but this sudden and unprovoked assault took me by surprise. I drew back, but the girl, who had completely lost all control over herself, struck at me again, and I was obliged to seize her by the arm. She struggled violently to get free, and at this moment the young philosopher, closing his disquisition on seeing me thus disgaged, advanced swiftly towards us.

"Why are you assaulting this lady?" he cried, and in another instant he had sprung at my throat.

I struck the youth as light a blow as I could with the palm of my hand on his chest, which sent him staggering backwards some few feet where he crumpled to the floor. I hated doing it, for it was like striking a woman, but I could not bear to be mauled by these wretches. They were such wrecks of humanity that I felt at once desperately sorry for them, but full of irrepressible disgust.

This scene had been witnessed with complete indifference by the other persons in the room, except for a young girl who rushed forward and kneeling down, bent over the man whom I had been obliged to stretch on the floor.

"Rudolf," she cried, "you're hurt. He has killed you. How could he be so cruel."

He rose, however, and, pushing her callously aside, came towards me slowly, while the young woman, still on her knees, began to sob maddeningly, tonelessly, and without break. Expecting another attack I got ready to fend him off, but to my amazement he suddenly fell on his knees before me and looking up at me with an expression indescribably abject began to profess himself incoherently but with pitiable urgency as my servant and slave.

"See," he said, "everything I have is yours. There is nothing I will not give you. I will give you my treasure,' he said, "if only you will be kind to me."

"For heaven's sake, man," I said roughly, "get up and pull yourself together."

On this he suddenly scrambled to his feet and darted to a corner of the room, where he began pulling furtively at a loose board. With shaking fingers he succeeded after a moment in prying it up, and slipping his hand underneath, he withdrew a small scrap of dirty white paper with which he returned.

"See," he said, an expression of reverence coming into his eyes, "I have been saving it for weeks. It is my little white hag—the little one who whispers along my veins and gives me rest."

EAST LIVERPOOL—AMERICA'S POTTERY CENTER

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1927.

Building Boom For East Liverpool

East Liverpool district will witness an extensive building program this spring, judging from announcement made yesterday of plans for an industrial plant and two gasoline filling stations, not to mention prospective homes. Probably one million dollars will be invested in the various projects.

The Patterson Foundry and Machine company will build a modern factory and office building on the Martin tract in East End, while the Fisher Oil and Gas company and James Brown, owner of the B. & W. Tire company, will erect gasoline stations on Broadway-Fifth street and Dresden avenue sites.

In addition the Homer Laughlin China company is considering the construction of another pottery plant in Newell.

And the building boom is not confined to the East Liverpool district. Chicago, according to press dispatches, will spend a half billion dollars in five years. St. Louis runs it a close second with a program which, when the size of the city is considered, is almost as pretentious.

During these same five years St. Louis expects to complete public improvements aggregating about $80,000,000. They include a $6,000,000 memorial plaza, a $12,000,000 waterworks, a $5,000,000 auditorium, a $4,000,000 courthouse, an $8,000,000 street lighting system and a $16,000,000 sewer plan, with large additional sums allowed for better fire equipment, new parks and playgrounds, elimination of grade crossings and other purposes of utility and beauty.

Many other American cities are pursuing the same liberal policy. There is hardly a community of any size that is not planning some notable structure or improvement.

Talk about a lull in the building boom! As the scramble for new homes and hotels and private business structures begins to ease a little, municipalities everywhere get into the game with public building plans. We seem, in our American cities, to be entering an age of public building rivalling the age of Pericles in Athens. Noble and beautiful structures are arising on all sides. Architecture is flourishing in the United States more than anywhere else in the world.

Leave any prosperous American city for 20 years, and you will not know it when you return; but you will surely admire it for its fine city hall and courthouse, its postoffice building, its churches and business structures and memorials and apartment houses, and its pleasant parks and spacious, dignified square and thoroughfares.

Panama And Nicaragua

The American public seems to be losing interest in Nicaragua, feeling that while the situation there is not altogether satisfactory, it will probably work out all right. And perhaps it will, sooner or later. But there are curious complications with other Latin-American countries.

Panama is the most striking example, since Mexico began to disappear from the Nicaragua scene.

Newspaper readers may remember reading, a few weeks ago, about a treaty negotiated between the United States and Panama, and submitted by the president of Panama to the national assembly for approval. It was a treaty which bound the United States and Panama more closely together, correcting some conditions unsatisfactory to Panama and incidentally assuring this country of more complete control over the Panama Canal, with thoroughgoing co-operation on the part of Panama in case it ever became necessary to defend the canal against foreign attack.

The Panama government and public were friendly to the treaty. Then came the landing of American marines in Nicaragua, and all the resulting developments that attracted the attention of the world to that country. Immediately opposition was shown to the new treaty. There were public demonstrations against it and appeals to "safeguard Panama's sovereignty." Then, near the end of January, the Panama assembly by a vote of 39 out of 46 shelved the treaty.

Panama seems to have turned "anti-American." And thus it looks as if Uncle Sam's efforts to safeguard the canal rights in Nicaragua have, in a totally unexpected way, made canal rights less safe in Panama.

Stand-Pat Immigration

The action of the United States senate in voting unanimously to extend the present immigration restriction quotas for another year has been called a "Nordic triumph." It is not necessarily that.

The continuance of the present quotas instead of the new plan proposed does prevent a sharp reduction in the number of admissible Germans, Irish and Scandinavians, who are mostly blonds of the vaunted Nordic type. On the other hand, it prevents the doubling of the admissible number of British, North Irish and Russians, who are also mainly blonds and Nordics. Thus the "national origins" scheme, temporarily defeated, would not have made much difference in the relative proportion of Nordics, Alpines and Mediterraneans admitted, though it would make considerable difference to certain nationalities.

The senate vote is little more than a stand-pat victory actuated by a desire to avoid trouble by keeping the immigrant situation as it is.

There are big stakes in China—and big mistakes.

West Toonerville News Item— By Fontaine Fox

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Musical comedy producers must have the most understanding of wives. There is an easy camaraderie between the producer and the show girl that would wreck most homes on the divorce rocks.

It is not unusual for a producer to reach the fireside at night with a tiny crimson cupid's bow from red lips on his collar or strands of yellow or black hair on his shoulder. It is customary for girls in their enthusiasm to sit on his lap and give him a misplaced smack.

In reality it means nothing for the show girl as a rule looks upon the producer as a sort of fatherly soul to whom she may creep when tired of the buffeting. Strangely enough there are few jealous mates among wives of such producers.

There home lives, in most instances, are pleasant. But few of the wives ever go to their husband's office. It seems a part of their wifely duty to keep in the background. Likely as not they may find two or three perched on the husband's desk or patting his cheek.

"Stage kisses" in the show world are as lightly bestowed as a hand wave. And at rehearsals the ordinary conventions are taboo. The chorus, due to the gruelling grind, are usually rehearsed sans stockings and wearing scanty rompers.

At the all-night rehearsal, preceding a premiere, taut nerves often snap and it is then the producer must calm hysterical flare-ups. Not only among the chorus, but principals and even the director as well. I have seen directors actually tear their hair and swoon.

It is told one musical show producer had his wife sign a prenuptial agreement completely ignore powdered shoulders, dearie talk over the telephone and the like. "It is only in this way," the agreement read, "that our home will be kept peaceful and happy." The idea has clicked.

There are, a spy tells me, six men who are able to salvage a living from the old-time saloon bar with brass rail. They have them made into portable shape and when the call comes they trundle them to a "party." There is no law—that is up to the minute—against it, of course, and they will also furnish a barkeep with a spit curl and a diamond ring encircling the cravat if necessary. The host or hostess must furnish ingredients. Many of the perambulating bars are booked until late in the spring. The advantage, it is pointed out, is in saving the carpets, furniture, brie-a-brac, etc., by having a central filling station, as it were.

My Favorite Stories

By IRVIN S. COBB

PRACTICALLY NO REASON FOR IT.

There once was a clerk of the hotel in a small Maine town who had a unique way of keeping a diary. Each evening he wrote on the bottom lines of the page of the register for the current date a brief account of the principal daily doings in the community, usually coupled with a summary of his own personal reactions to them. Sometimes his phraseology was unusual but always it was amply descriptive.

A friend of mine was stopping at the the hotel, having gone up to Maine on a fishing trip. He fell into the habit of glancing through the back pages of the register, more from the enjoyment he got from the quaint language of the entries than because he was interested in bygone neighborhood history.

On succeeding pages of the book for a week of the early spring of the year previous, he found these progressive records of a local tragedy:

Tuesday: "While fishing through the ice yesterday, Henry Whippet fell in the Saco river up to his neck. He was drawed out and took home."

Wednesday: 'Henry Whippett is in bed with a powerful bad cold. His folks are thinking some about calling in a doctor."

Thursday: "Henry Whippet is rapidly continuing to get no better. It now looks like he is fixing to break out with the pneumonia."

Friday: "Henry Whippet is sinking rapidly."

Saturday: "At nine o'clock this morning our esteemed fellow-citizen, Henry Whippet, Esq., went to his Maker entirely uncalled for."

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

First Aid for Gas Victims.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—In a recent article on carbon monoxide poisoning the statement was made that in case of an accident of that nature the thing to do was to summon a physician at once and then make an effort to secure from the most readily available source one of the machines that are used to resuscitate persons overcome by gas or other poisonous fumes.

That there is something else to be done in the way of first aid that is exceedingly important is asserted by Alexander Forward, managing director of the American Gas association, and he ought to know what he is talking about since his organization created a committee on resuscitation from gas asphyxiation, composed of some of the most eminent authorities in the United States, and has given wide circulation to the recommendations of the experts. Mr. Forward and his company are interested because they control a large number of gas companies thorughout the country and it is a matter of great importance that every man identified with their organization should know what to do in such emergencies.

Dr. Cecil K. Drinker, associate professor of applied physiology of the Medical School of Harvard university, was the chairman of the committee that made an exhaustive study of the subject. His associates were Dr. Walter B. Cannon, professor of physiology of the same school; Dr. L. Edsall, the dean of that school; Dr. Howard W. Haggard and Dr. Yandell Henderson, both of Yale university and both consulting physiologists to the United States Bureau of Mines; Dr. Lawrence J. Henderson and Dr. Francis W. Peabody, both of the Harvard Medical school; Dr. Royd R. Sayers, chief surgeon of the United States Bureau of Mines and a surgeon of the Public Health service; and Charles B. Scott, of the Accident Prevention committee of the American Gas association.

The conclusions reached by a group of such recognized leaders of their profession are accepted without question by physicians everywhere. Laymen will do well to read and learn.

The Prone Pressure Method.

The report explains that the reason that automobile exhaust gas, the gases from coal heating furnaces, the smoke from fires, producer gas, coke oven gas, blast furnace gas, carbureted water gas, coal gas, and other manufactured gases are poisonous if actually breathed is that they all contain carbon monoxide. When carbon monoxide is breathed it combines with the blood and the victim becomes asphyxiated just as if he were being gradually choked to death. As low as one-tenth of one per cent of carbon monoxide, or even less, will kill a man in time; one per cent will kill in a few minutes.

When a man is overcome by gas, it is stated, the first thing to do is to get him into fresh air quickly. Fresh air does not mean out of doors in cold weather. Many men have walked from a warm room containing gas only to collapse in the cold air outside. Take the patient to a room free from gas and comfortably warm. Be quick, but don't be unnecessarily rough.

If the patient is not breathing or his breathing stops, start artificial respiration at once by the prone pressure method. And—here is the point that Mr. Forward stresses—don't wait for a physician or any apparatus or any one or anything else. Get to work with your own hands. A delay of even a minute may be fatal.

The prone pressure method—known as the Schafer method—is urged as the best method for artificial respiration—better than any method using a mechanical device. If the victim is breathing, an artificial respiration apparatus may injure him. If he is not breathing, he may die while you are getting the apparatus or getting ready to use it. It is the opinion of the committee that such apparatus has led to the deaths of more people than it has saved.

Now, here is how you go about prone pressure resuscitation: As soon as the victim is clear of the gas feel with your finger in his mouth and throat and remove any foreign body, such as chewing gum, tobacco, false teeth, and the like. Do not stop to loosen his clothing. Lay him on his tummy, one arm extended directly over his head, the other bent at the elbow and with face to one side, resting on the hand or forearm, so that the nose and mouth are free for breathing. Kneel straddling the patient with your knees just below his hip bones, and place the palms of your hands on the small of the back with

For Every Use In Construction

In building, no other part of the construction requires such skill and judgement as does the selection of your lumber. The carpenter and tinner may do a poor job, the plumber may fall down on his work—all these can be repaired and remedied, but if the wood-work—the very vitals of your house be poor—if the beams crack, the flooring sag, the weather-boards warp—there is no redress—your house will be doomed.

Buy your lumber from us, and you'll have no such ordeal to anticipate. You can sleep in peace in the knowledge that every foot is perfect and that it is thoroughly seasoned.

GOOD RESULTS

Is what you are striving for—and they will only come if your selection of important things is correct. Pay a little more for your lumber and have success crown your work.

EMMONS DRAFTS AMENDMENT TO HIS CROSSING BILL

PROPOSES VOTE IN NOVEMBER ON BOND ISSUE

Twenty-year Time Limit for Elimination of Death Traps.

ROADS PAY HALF

State, Municipalities and County Share in Cost.

By C. H. Haddox.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 5.—While both branches of the Ohio legislature here recessed over the week-end, Rep. R. W. Emmons, Columbiana county, today was drafting an amendment, which he proposes to introduce in the house early next week, to his resolution, offered in the house late Thursday. The resolution provides for submission to Ohio voters next November of a proposed amendment to the Ohio constitution permitting a $100,000,000 bond issue for the purpose of eliminating the approximately 2,000 dangerous railroad grade crossings throughout Ohio.

The proposed amendment to his resolution, Emmons said, will provide a 20-year time limit for the completion of this work, it, also is expected to provide for an additional state tax levy, on the general property duplicate, for the purpose of taking care of the state's share of the cost of eliminating the grade crossings.

Emmons' resolution provides that the railroads shall pay half of the most of this work, the state paying 25 per cent and the remaining 25 per cent being born by municipalities and counties. This additional tax levy, Emmons believed, need not exceed one-half of a mill and might be less than one-fourth of a mill. On the basis of a ¼ mill tax, the taxpayers would pay $1 annually on each $4,000 worth of property, he, or she, owned.

Donahey Endorses Plan.

Predicting that the proposed constitutional amendment will be adopted, if the Emmons' resolution is adopted by the state legislature, Director of Highways George Schlessinger expressed belief that the work of eliminating these grade crossings could be performed most effectively by creating a separate division, in the state highway department, for supervising this work.

Not taking into consideration the many thousands of persons who sustained temporary and permanent, but not fatel, injuries, during the past three years in Ohio at railroad crossings, more than 450 persons were killed in, or as a result of, accidents occurring at these crossings, according to records of the state bureau of vital statistics.

Property damage resulting from such accidents are not recorded by the state. Deaths, due to grade crossing accidents, in 1924, totaled 113; in 1925, 165, and 1926 they are expected to total about 200. The record for last year is not complete, but 180 such deaths for 1926 have already been recorded in the vital statistics bureau.

Hearty endorsement of the proposal to elminate grade crossings has been voiced by Governor Vic Donahey. The governor stated that, although he had not had time to study the Emmons' resolution, he had been told that it follows generally the suggestions the governor embodied in his recent message to the legislature.

COLLEEN MOORE AT AMERICAN

"Twinkletoes" Adapted From Limehouse District Tale.

"Twinkletoes" is the intriguing title of Colleen Moore's latest starring vehicle, which comes to the American theatre Monday for a three-day run.

It was adapted from Thomas Burke's famous tale of the Limehouse district of London, and the combination of star, story and setting make "Twinkletoes" one of the most promising entertainment offerings that has shown here in many moons.

Kenneth Harlan, Gladys Brockwell, Warner Oland, Julanne Johnston, Tully Marshall, John Philip Kolb and Lucian Littlefield bring to life other famous characters of the Burke story.

They portray Limehouse folks, picturesque characters from that London maritime slum where all races and kinds of humans meet around the wharves, tenements, dingy shops and dives, and sinister plots are born in the narrow, mysterious streets bordering the water front.

The action centers around a charming love affair between "Twinkletoes" and a young Limehouse pugilist, Chuck Lightfoot. Twink is a dancer in the Quayside theatre, and for this role Colleen has discarded her black Dutch bob and appears with curly golden hair.

The story is freely sprinkled with sparkling comedy, but a powerful menace continually haunts the bright, lovable little heroine; the sinister powers of the Limehouse and its denizens gather to destroy her—and keep the spectator tense with emotion.

There is the theatre manager and chorus master, named Doseleaf, to whom Twink's innocence appeals as a lure ing before the state legislature, which makes $10,000 liability insurance compulsory of all automobile owners. The chamber contends that such insurance would not decrease traffic accidents.

State Senators Harry C. Carpenter and Earl Lewis and State Representatives Ralph Emmons and W. R. VanFossan will be urged to vote against this measure.

The directors also endorsed the joint resolution introduced by Emmons in the house of representatives this week which, if adopted, would direct state purchasing agents for Ohio institutions to buy Ohio-made pottery in the future. This measure has the approval of all general ware manufacturers in the Buckeye state.

M. A. PANE, 70, VET RAILROAD MAN, RETIRES

Watchman at St. Clair Avenue Crossing for 18 Years.

38-YEAR RECORD

Born in Italy, But Was Naturalized as U. S. Citizen.

Michael A. Pane, 70, Cleveland and Pittsburgh railroad employe for 38 years, of which 18 were spent as crossing watchman at St. Clair avenue, retired today.

Pane was born at Adams, Italy, Jan. 11, 1857. He came to America December 13, 1881, at the age of 25 years, and stopped at Utica, N. Y., where he obtained employment on grade work for a new railroad.

He continued at this work for about a year, when he went to Verona, Pa., and again obtained employment on a new railroad line at that point. Six months later he moved to Germantown, Pa., where he remained one year then went to Elizabeth, Pa., and a year and a half later went to Indiana, having done the same kind of work for new railroad lines in each of these places.

Pane only remained in Indiana about a month, when he came to East Liverpool, and started working for the Pennsylvania on Section No. 4, Oct. 1, 1888, with Forman Dennis Hickey.

Pane worked on this section as trackman for 20 years, and then accepted employment as crossing watchman at St. Clair avenue, May 7, 1908, the duties of which position he has faithfully performed to the date of his retirement.

Pane was naturalized as a citizen of the United States in 1892, at East Liverpool. He was married October, 28, 1889, and to this union were born 11 children, all of whom are living and reside at East Liverpool.

HAROLD LLOYD IN COMEDY HIT

"The Kid Brother" at Ceramic Theatre Next Week.

Harold Lloyd is scheduled to lead the feature comedy parade for 1927, for his newest Paramount release, "The Kid Brother," is slated to reach the Ceramic on Monday for a week's run.

"The new year," said a Lloyd official, "should bring a flock of mountain boy comedies into being, for it's that type of picture which Lloyd has just completed, and in many quarters of filmdom Harold's creations are copied as religiously as the works of artists in any line. This is quite apparent when one considers the number of football and college pictures which followed 'The Freshman,' forerunner of the present cycle of similar productions. Following 'Grandma's Boy' there came an avalanche of comedies with a similar theme and in pursuit of 'Safety Last,' a flock of 'Safety Last' offerings and thrill pictures of various types, all modeled along the lines of the Lloyd opus, arrived.

"The entire Lloyd organization is confident that 'The Kid Brother' will be established as one of the comic's greatest. Even Lloyd, who rarely is any dynamo of enthusiasm, has waxed enthusiastic over this one."

The story of the new Lloyd is simple, yet forceful, according to studio reports. It relates the tale of the youngest son of a family of strong men—three brothers, and father—who control the mountain town in which they live.

MIDLAND MILL WORKER SHOT

John Budich, 35, Says he Was Bandit Victim.

Midland police today are investigating the mysterious shooting of John Budich, 35-year-old mill worker, who is in the Rochester General hospital suffering from a bullet wound in the back, which he claims to have sustained in an attempted hold-up.

Dr. J. A. Helfrich, who was summoned to attend him, ordered the man's removal to the hospital.

Budich told Sergant Keller of the Midland police department that two Negroes had held him up on his way to his boarding house, and when he resisted one of them shot him. About $55 in cash and a gold watch in Budich's clothes were not taken.

Police plan to question Budich at the hospital as soon as his condition permits.

QUANTICO, Va., Feb. 5.—Lieut. Andrew J. Holderby, his 6-year-old daughter, Clothilde, and Miss Elenore Griffin, a guest in the Holderby home, were suffocated this morning in a fire that broke out in the officers' quarters at the marine base here.

A sentry noticed smoke pouring from a second story window of the Holderby home shortly after daylight this morning. He sounded a fire alarm. The flames were soon extinguished, but the three were dead when found, indicating that the fire had smoldered a long time before it was noticed.

TOKIO CROWDED FOR FUNERAL OF EMPEROR

Services for Yoshihito Will be Held on Monday.

COLORFUL EVENT

Thousands of Soldiers Will be on Duty in Streets.

TOKIO, Feb. 5.—Large numbers of persons from all parts of the empire began arriving here today to witness or participate in the funeral of the late Emperor Yoshihito which will be held Monday night. Thousands of visitors are expected, some coming from the Asiatic mainland.

In addition to the entire police force thousands of soldiers will be employed in guarding the streets and directing traffic Monday and Tuesday morning. It is anticipated that at least 100,000 persons, most of them school children or members of the Young Men's association will be massed in the "Gaisen Dora" or triumphal way, that leads through the outer grounds to the Imperial Palace to the Nijubashi gate during the slow passage of the funeral caravan.

The funeral procession itself, which will depart from the Imperial Palace at 6 o'clock in the evening, will be a colorful spectacle, profoundly impressive to the occidental spectator and profoundly moving to the Japanese. All the costumes worn by the marching mourners, except the uniforms of soldiers and sailors, will be old court style of feudal days.

Imperial princes and princesses will be garbed in the richly decorated robes which ancient court regulations prescribed for such an occasion. Cabinet ministers will wear costumes hallowed by centuries of tradition. The myriad of Shinto priests who will take part in the rites will be clothed in ceremonial garments specified by processional rites which go back so far as to be almost lost in the mists of antiquity. All the costumes had been especially made for the occasion.

The fact that the procession will be held at night will add to its picturesqueness. Thousands of lanterns and torches will light the way. These soft lights flittering through the embellished paper globes will shine on multi-colored oriental costumes giving a phantastic enchantment which one could never find outside the orient.

So elaborate were the preparations that it has been estimated the funeral will cost more than $1,000,000.

Prince Chichibu, brother of the reigning emperor, came from England to attend the funeral. He was a student at Oxford university, but is unlikely to return.

fingers over the ribs, the little finger just touching the lowest rib and the thumb alongside of the fingers.

Keep it Up for Hours.

Then, while counting one, two and with arms held straight, swing forward slowly so that the weight of your body is gradually but not violently brought to bear upon the patient. While counting three, swing backward so as to remove the pressure, and rest while counting four, five. Repeat these operations deliberately, and continue this artificial respiration without interruption until natural breathing is restored—if necessary for four hours or longer, or until a physician declares rigor mortis has set in. If natural breathing stops after being restored, use resuscitation again.

As soon as artificial respiration has been started, and while it is being continued, an assistant should loosen any tight clothing about the patient's neck, chest, or waist, and the patient should be kept warm, as for him to become chilled means a strain on his already weakened vitality and may kill him or help to cause pneumonia. Never give an unconscious man anything to drink. It may choke him. Never administer whiskey, for it acts on a man in much the same way as gas and makes a gassed man worse. Hot black coffee is excellent if the patient is conscious enough to drink it. And the patient must be kept quiet. Any exertion may be fraught with serious consequences.

Supplementing this first aid the inhaler may be used and it is recommended that five per cent of carbon dioxide—the gas that is in soda water—be mixed with the oxygen. This makes the patient breathe much more deeply and the carbon dioxide also keeps the breathing from stopping.

And those who are succoring gas victims are warned not to take any chances on breathing the poisonous fumes even for a short time. If you have to go into gas to get a man out, remember that a handkerchief tied about the nose and mouth is not a gas mask. Many have died in the belief that it is. It does not stop carbon monoxide. It simply filters off the irritating fumes in smoke. If you must go into gas or smoke, wear a mask and air hose, or an oxygen breathing apparatus, or a gas mask with canister, and be sure the gas mask is specially made to stop carbon monoxide. A smoke mask or an amonia mask that does not stop carbon monoxide is particularly dangerous.

The importance of reiterated warnings against carbon monoxide and of disseminating information as to what to do in cases of monoxide poisoning, is shown by the fact that so many people will not believe the deadly nature of this gas until something happens to them. When it happens it is usually fatal unless someone is on hand who knows what to do and will do it in double-quick time.

Prone pressure first aid, by the way, is also effective in cases of electricity shock or drowning.

Germany Oversupplied With Physicians; Many Entering New Fields

BERLIN.—Germany is over-supplied with physicians. Medical students, now enrolled in German universities, have little chance of large practices in the future, unless their ability is quite unusual.

Physicians complain that even today there are not enough patients to go around and many German doctors, who are able practitioners, are having hard times, especially in the larger cities where physicians are particularly numerous.

Many doctors in Berlin and elsewhere have given up their practice altogether during the last few years and have gone into business or some other profession such as journalism.

How About the Kidneys?

Miss Mary Louise Gramling

Conneaut, Ohio—"Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets have done wonders for my little girl's kidneys. Ever since she was a small child she suffered from weak kidneys. I doctored and gave her medicine but could find nothing that seemed to help her or strengthen her kidneys until, thru the advice of a relative, I started to give her 'Anuric Tablets' and by the time I had given her two bottles, her kidneys were in fine condition and have given her no more trouble."—Mrs. R. Beware Winter's Colds and Chills

To Be Fit Keep the System Free From Toxins.

COLDS, chills and changing temperature throw extra burdens on our kidneys. Sluggish function is apt to permit retention of waste poisons in the blood and make one more susceptible to winter's ills. When such retention occurs, one feels achy, tired and listless—is subject to drowsy headaches, dizziness and perhaps a toxic backache. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by burning or scanty secretions. Doan's Pills have earned an enviable reputation in these conditions. Ask your neighbor!

Juvenile Bible Study

One question for each day is provided. The parent will find it interesting and helpful to have the child take up the question each day and aid it in finding the answer in the Scriptures, thus developing a knowledge of the Bible and where to find in it the things decided. Send or bring the little folks to the class Sunday at 1:45 p. m. The "Ceramic Cafeteria Auditorium." 121 West Fifth Street.

555. What nation was destroyed because it was so wicked?

Answer: Sodom. See Genesis 19: 23-25.

556. Their punishment was death; but was it to be an everlasting punishment; that is, the second death?

Answer: No. They are to "return to their former state" (Ezekiel 16:53,-55) and they will have a better chance; it will be "more tolerable" for them than for other cities that were not destroyed. See Matthew 10:15.

557. Will there be a period of time when all the willfully wicked will be destroyed forever?

Answer: Yes. It is called "the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men."—2 Peter 3:7.

558. How long a period of time will it be?

Answer: A thousand years.

559. Besides being a day of perdition, or everlasting destruction what else is it called?

Answer: It is called "the judgment day;" because all are to have a full, fair trial before they are judged worthy or unworthy of everlasting life. "God hath appointed a day (thousand-year-day) in which he will (in the future) judge the world in righteousness." (Acts 17:31). See also Matthew 25:31-46 and Revelation 11:17-18.

560. At what time will a great many die the second death — be destroyed as unworthy of everlasting life?

Answer: At the end of the thousand-year judgment day. See Revelation 20:7-9.

561. Will any die the second death during the thousand-year judgment day?

Answer: Yes. "The child shall die an hundred years old." (Isaiah 65:20) That is to say, that any one that still remains a child—has made no progress for a hundred years—"shall be destroyed from among the people." (Acts 3:22-23). "The sinner being an hundred years old shall be accursed" (judged unworthy of everlasting life) —Isaiah 65:20.

REV. E. E. LASHLEY'S SERMON ON "JOYS OF TEMPTATION"

Discourse Delivered by Pastor of First Presbyterian Church of Newell.

Text James 1-2 My brethren count it all joy when you fall in divers (many kinds of) temptations.

The James who is the author of this letter is spoken of in Paul's letter to the Galatians as a "brother" of our Lord; and, in the Acts we learn that he was as at the head of the Christian church in Jerusalem. He interprets the teachings of the Christ in their bearing on the daily conduct of life, and is often regarded as one of the most practical of the New Testament writers, in contrast with St. Paul who interprets the teachings of the Redeemer of men, especially in the Letter to the Romans from a doctrinal viewpoint. St. Paul emphasizes the beliefs of men, St. James the deeds of men. The one says that we should believe the teachings of the Christ, the other calls us to express the teachings of Christ in terms of life.

James has striking views as to the temptations of life. To him the strength, power and beauty of the Christian life do not shine so brightly as when meeting its foes, conquering them in battle, and coming off the field as a triumphant victor. This evidently is what he means when he refers to them as a "joy." How often we pray, "Lead us not into temptation," and no doubt they are often foes to be avoided, but it all depends upon the way in which we meet them. In resisting the temptations of life we may show forth the moral heroism of Christian character, the power of Christian principles and through them glorify our Lord so they may be the occasion of "joy." With these thoughts in mind let us note:

I. First:—Temptations are a joy in that they emphasize the fact that the Soul of man is of great value.

Each one in the world finds himself overatured by opposing interests, one carnal, sensuous and worldly; the other moral, spiritual and divine. One set of forces emenate from the devil's world, the other from God's world. One works in the interests of the kingdom of evil, and the other in the interests of the kingdom of the good. To which are you responding by the homage and service of your life? Evil has never been so alluring, attractive and deceiving as it is today. Evidently Satan places a great value upon man's soul.

God also values man's life. Man was completely a captive in the service of evil, so God sent his only begotten Son to rescue and save. He emptied the glory world of the One altogether lovely, the chiefest among ten thousand" that whosoever believeth upon Him might not perish but have everlasting life. As a sacrifice in grace and love He died to atone for man's sin: what is Calvary but man's eulogy written in the characters of our Redeeemer's own life crimson. He who belittles life cheapens the sacrifice of Calvary, for the gift of His Son was the price He was willing to pay. Evidently God regards man's soul as of great value.

II. Secondlp, Temptations May be a Joy Because They Show Some Goodness in the One to Whom Temptations Come.

Sin does not appeal in the form of an allurement to one morally and spiritually lost and dead. He is the finished product of sin and evil ways are his native ways. The Bible teaches that there is such a state as being "dead in trespasses and sins," as being so low in iniquity as to be "past feeling."

It is possible to so indulge and feed the animal in human nature that the soul, man's higher, spiritual self, is starved, dwarfed, atrophied, so that religion and the appeals of holy faith are as a dead language to one in such a lost condition. Only the animal is alive. To present to these unfortunates the higher life in Christ, the holy joys of communion with God, is like offering a copy Emmerson's essays to a nest of kittens, or having a symphony orchestra play Handel's "Messiah" to a rat-terrier pup. From such the criminal classes are usually recruited the stories of their misdeeds shocking the world through the newspapers, lowering, yes destroying the ideals of our youth. To them sin is "their native air," and evil their much loved way. So when the appeals of sin excite a war within the soul, awakening storms of protest of the better against the worse self within us all, it shows that the elements of good have not all yet been crushed to death, that "down in the human heart feelings lie buried that grace may restore," meaning hope and possibilities of a great redemption through the power of God, mighty to save.

We believe that the better one is and the higher he mounts on the high planes of Christian character the more he is tempted. Did you ever notice that the wind blows more firecely on the peak of a mountain. The more holy the character, and the finer one's sensitiveness to the distinctions between right and wrong, the more subtle the appeal of sin. So it was with Jesus. We are told He was led by the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil," Spirit-filled but devil tempted. Yes we are have our temptations no matter how good." It is one thing to be tempted, another thing to fall."

III. Thirdly, Temptations May be a Joy Because Strength of Character and Moral Power Result When Temptations are Resisted and Driven Back.

Ours is a world where strength comes through struggle and wrestling. It is a world where every new bridge must be tested by a string of locomotives to prove it will carry up a string of lighter passenger coaches. Desiring a mast for a ship or a beam for a noble building the woodsman does not seek a tree grown in the sheltered forest, but he goes into the open pasture where the tree has wrestled long with every opposing storm that for a century has beat upon it. The little boy in school is having a difficult time with his long division in arithmetic, and, oh, what a tax upon his patience and nerves! But every problem solved paves the way for problems more difficult, till by and by the richly developed mind is the result, and the fine strong young man stands forth.

Such is the picture of what temptations resisted do for the soul. Every temptation to be mean, to lie, to be licentious, to harbor hatred, to be proud, to neglect God and his claims, all of these if properly met by the power of Grace become stepping stones up which one may climb to higher things.

Friends, are your temptations opportunities to moral and spiritual victories? Are they your chance at moral power? They were to the perfect Man of Galilee, and they may be so to your all.

The story is told that inside an Austrian palace a young prince saw a crowd approaching. He though they were his enemies on a mission of harm. In reality they were his friends. They entered the palace door and he, in his fright and hurry to escape ran up one stair after another til he reached the highest room in the tower where he barricated the door. The perusing crowd broke in the door, captured the prince and placed upon his head the crown of Austria. Then he stood forth a king. God truly has placed us here in a world of possible sin to all, but every sin met and conquered means a crown to a noble manhood and a beautiful womanhood.

IV. Lastly note: From Every Temptation There is a Way of Escape.

We are told in Holy writ, and the statement is true to our experience that "God is faithful who will not suffer you to be tempted above that which you are able, but will with every temptation provide a way of escape." There is a power in Divine grace to overcome all manner of sin so that we will be held accountable for the way we meet sin at the day of judgment and must "give an account for the deeds done in the body." It will there be seen whether we have used it or used it not.

"CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP," IS SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Everybody's Deepest Interest is in Question of How to Live, Says Ellis.

By William T. Ellis.

Everybody's deepest interest is in the question of how to live. That outranks the other question of how to make a living. Each mortal has a right to life, to real life, to the best life. We are not mere passive pieces in a picture puzzle of existence, or wooden pawns in a game played by blind fate. Every human being is an individual personality, with an inalienable right to fullest development. In the very least of us, this divine dower cries out for expression. With all the power we possess, we protest that we are not chips on a stream, not straws in a wind, not parts of a machine, not helpless creatures of circumstances. Every one of us knows himself to be a spiritual entity, designed for freedom. Our innermost selves cry aloud for an experience that shall be more than the routine of a laborer, a clerk, a tender of business, a housekeeper, a lawyer, a mechanic, a mere money-maker. We scorn the lot of that Frenchman whose cynical epitaph ran:

"Born a man, died a grocer.'

In colloquial phrases, How may a person get hold of life by the handle, so as to wield it, instead of being wielded by it?

There are two principal answers, only one of which is true. That given by the rebellious spirits of the present generation is to use life as a toy. Play with it, toss it idly about, flout it, break it, throw it away, and by no means regard it seriously.

This may be called the "smart Aleck" philosophy, which disdains any serious or comprehensive attitude toward life. Its program is to live for the moment, and to satisfy every desire that is near and noisy. Whatever is old is fogyish and foolish. (By the way, what will happen when the Jazzites waken up to the realization that life is long and real and earnest, and that it contains old age, as well as youth? "Smart Aleckism" is a philosophy only for immaturity.) Duty, drudgery, responsibility, veneration—these are taboo words and taboo principles with our merry materialists. They are only out for "a good time," even if they must have it by being bad.

There is another and truer answer for those who would take hold of life by the handle. It is expressed in all the stored-up literature and lore of the race; but best in Holy Writ. This principle that every man's life has opportunities and obligations outside of himself. In the Christian conception, life is a mission, a responsibility, a stewardship. It is a talent entrusted to us by God, for the use and increase of which we are accountable.

By this interpretation, man is sent into the world with powers and possibilities for development. His chief end is to fulfill his capabilities of growth and of service. Because he partakes of the Divine nature, he has been given a Divine mission. His own soul-stature depends upon his acceptance of responsibilities commensurate with his character. A pregnant word of wise old Paul—one of the few explicit statements in Scripture of why Christ was offered up on the Cross—puts the principle thus, in his Second Letter to the Corinthians (5:15: "He died for all, that they that live should no longer live unto themselves, but unto Him who for their sakes died and rose again." And, of course, to live for Christ is to live for men: "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto Me."

So life is not a pastime, but a purpose. We take it by the handle when we grasp it as God's gift, meant to be used for its highest ends. In the parable of Jesus which is this Lesson, life is a talent to be employed. This stewardship conception, which runs through all of the Bible, puts power into living. It not only saves the spirit from pessimism and discouragement, and from the withering blight of aimlessness, but it also lifts it up to the Divine level. With Jesus, the person who has devoted himself to this sacred conception of life may say, reverently, "The Father worketh hitherto, and I work." The talent-man finds himself to be in unity with the universe; in league with the stones of the field;" bound up in the bundle of God's will. Existence yields its sweetest secrets to those persons who have apprehended this primary significance of life, as a talent to be possessed and employed, and increased, in responsibility to a wise Father's will.

Two Successful, One Failure

Here is a "success" story that will stand all tests. Its sanity, sensibleness and accord with the known conditions of life are apparent. We call it the Parable of the Talents, as related by Jesus. He pictured a rich man as about to go on a journey, giving eight talents—nearly ten thousand dollars in all; for the Roman talent was worth approximately twelve hundred dollars—into the keeping of three servants. One man was entrusted with five talents, one with two talents, and another with one talent. The first two doubled their capital during their master's absence, but the third buried his one talent; and then blamed his employer for his own failure to increase it.

Human ability is not on a flat level, according to this story. All men are not equal, except in rights and opportunity. The landlord in the parable distributed the talents "to every man according to his several ability." There are five-talent men and three-talent men and one-talent men in every sphere—with the possibility that the five-talent man may cravenly slip into the one-talent classification, and that the one-talent man may climb into the five-talent level. Each is to be rewarded according to the use he makes of his own gifts. Many a modest mother, who has never been heard of outside of her own neighborhood, is more of a success than a spectacular statesman who has been faithless to his highest possibilities. Failure like success, is relative.

We can easily understand the two successes in the story. They were normal men, accepting a trust and seizing an opportunity. But what about the man who somehow "cannot get along." He buried his talent, as the peasant in the East buries his savings. His was the old-stocking conception of thrift. He did not trust banks, or his fellow men. Doubtless because he was only a one-talent man, timit, shiftless, irresponsible, he let his gift lie idle.

FUND FOR TENT NUCLEUS FOR WORSHIP HOUSE

Chester Christian Church Was Organized in 1903.

26 ON CHARTER

Rev. Alfred E. Sims Serving Third Term as Pastor.

The town of Chester boasted of a population of nearly 3,000 persons before any attempt was made to organize a Christian church there.

In the fall of 1903, Secretary Linkletier, of the West Virginia Christian Missionary society, called a meeting of those persons who had belonged to Christian churches elsewhere and who had taken up their residence in Chester. Fifteen persons responded to the call for the session which was held in the school building.

A temporary organization was formed and F. M. Pittman, student at Bethany college, was called to preach. For six months he continued to make his week-end visits to Chester. Finally during the late spring of 1904 Gerald Culbertson, also a student at Bethany, was called as pastor. Like Pittman, Culbertson made week-end visits to Chester until after his graduation in 1906.

Permanent organization of the Chester church was formed in May, 1904, with 26 charter members. Six of these men are still affiliated with the church, others have moved away or died.

Meetings were held first in a hall at First street and later the congregation moved to a hall in Virginia avenue. Soon after the temporary organization was formed a lot, 40x140 feet, had been purchased as the site of the present building.

One very hot Sunday morning of July, 1904, being oppressed by the little hall where the congregation was meeting, it was decided to buy a tent and place it on the lot for the services during the summer months. Before the canvass for funds was complete it was found that more than was needed to buy a tent had been secured, so it was decided to put up a more permanent building.

The congregation completed the campaign for funds and with the aid of a $600 loan from the Church Extension society, they erected a brick building, 40x68 feet, much of the labor being donated. This was occupied on Christmas Day, 1904, and the loan was paid off in five years. Much credit is due to Mr. Culbertson for this first success.

In 1906, Mr. Culberson resigned and during the next five years there followed in succession as pastors, C. N. Filson, R. B. Strickler and Asa B. Stickley.

About 1910, Miss Mary E. McDaniel gave to the church a lot adjoining the church and a house and another lot for a parsonage, located in Indiana avenue, near Second street. It was also during 1910 that an addition was built back of the church which added a baptistry, three class rooms and the basement which was used as the meeting place for the men's class, organized about this time.

It was during 1910 or 1911 that Gerald Culberson was called back for a revival campaign which proved to be one of the most beneficial ever held in Chester. The remarkable thing about it was that of the 78 members received into the church during the campaign, 62 were heads of families, fathers and mothers. In the meeting held by S. M. Martin in 1923 nearly 100 members were added.

C. G. Huffer was called in 1912 and it was during his pastorate of nearly three years that the present commodious and up-to-date church building was erected. Another lot adjoining the church was purchased in 1912, making the property 120x140 feet in the most central location in town.

The building campaign was launched in the early spring of 1913. The old structure was razed and the new was so nearly completed that services were held in it on Christmas. However, the dedication was not until the spring of 1914, at which time pledges were taken to cover all indebtedness payable in five years.

The church is a brick building consisting of auditorium, lecture room, 10 class rooms and basement with dining room and kitchen and assembly room. The main auditorium and lecture room can be thrown together by rolling partition, giving seating capacity of about 500.

Since 1914 there have been five different pastors: C. E. Rostofer, two years; John R. Clark, two years; E. Z. Gallager, one year; W. Grant Ward, four years; Alfred E. Sims, present pastor, who has been there nearly three years.

During 1923, the old parsonage was sold and the property directly across the street from the church, consisting of two lots with an eight-room house, garage, fruit trees and garden, was purchased. A conservative estimate of the value of the church property, including the parsonage, would be $60,000.

At present there are nearly 400 members. There is a graded Bible school with classes suitable to all ages and an attendance running close to 300 or more. A daily vacation Bible school was conducted last summer. There is a Young People's society of Christian Endeavor from which one young man has gone out to enter the ministry and was ordained Dec. 26, 1926.

A troop of Boy Scouts was organized last spring and is growing in interest and in numbers.

More than 1,200 people have been members of the church at some time during the past 23 years.

New Testing Machine For Building Trade Has Great Pressure

CLEVELAND.—A machine for testing building materials and capable of exerting a pressure of 1,000,000 pounds, soon will be installed at Case School of Applied Science here.

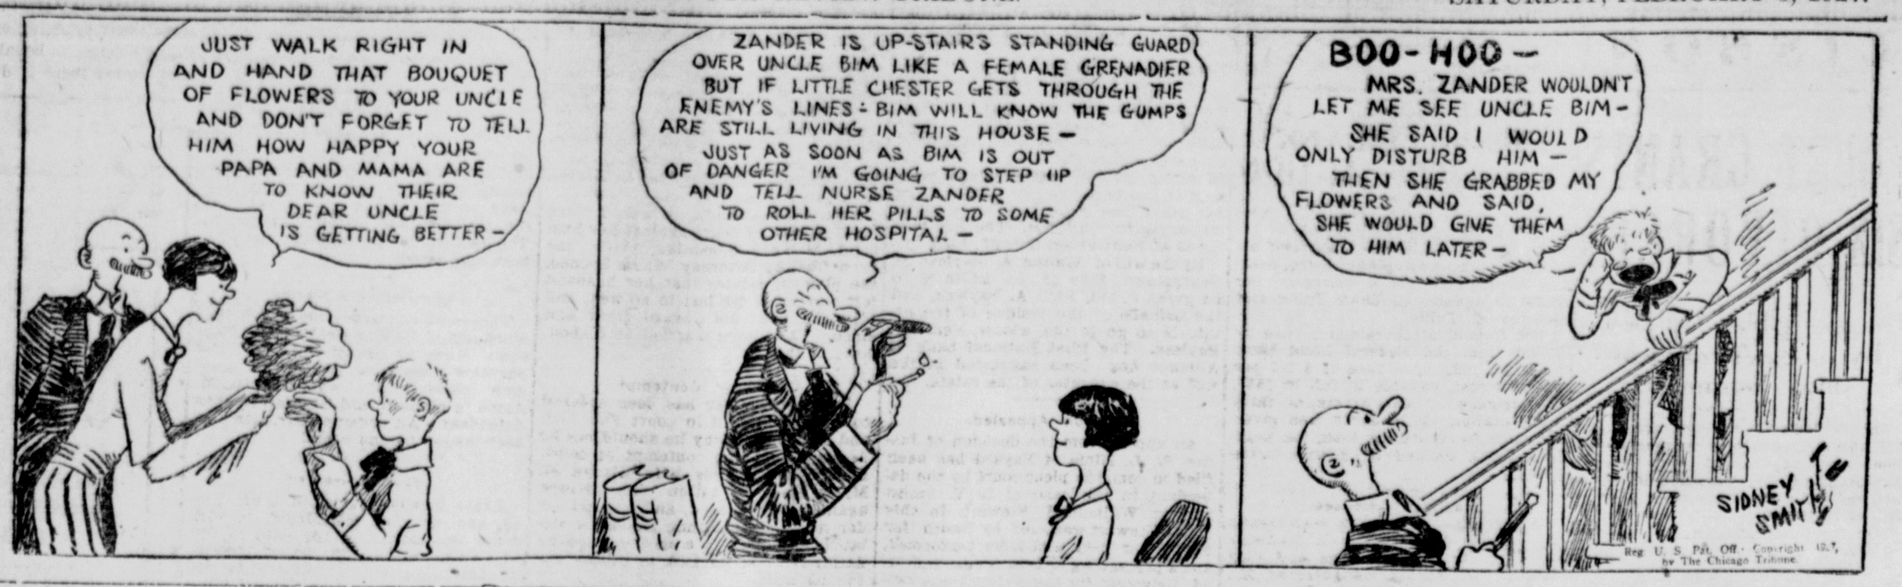

The machine will be capable of grinding to pieces 20 foot columns, 27 inches square. It will be twice as large as any similar machine now functioning.

"The public is demanding buildings at lower cost," declared Prof. Raymond H. Danforth, head of the department of hydraulics and mechanics, who will have charge of the new machine.

"Costs can be safely lowered only when we have facilities for testing the strength of parts."

Eight brides and eight bridegrooms were married simultaneously while many bridesmaids waited behind them in the Church of St. George the Martyr, Southwark, England, recently.

Dear Friends:

I notice that lots of men prefer wrist watches. Got used to them during the war.

Mr. Reese says when a man once gets used to the convenience of a wrist watch, he isn't satisfied with any other kind. A simple twist of the wrist and you've got the time of day.

I asked the boss a few minutes ago what a wrist watch costs. He says, "What does a house cost?" I says, "Different prices, I suppose." And he says, "Same with wrist watches."

They have them here at the store from $12.00 to $75.00—Illinois, Gruen Elgin, etc.

I know a lady that bought her husband a wrist watch from Mr. Reese and he sure was pleased.

Think that over, ladies.

High School Passers Hand Bellaire Second Lacing, 43-41

Contest Clinched In Third Quarter; Play Akron Tonight

Both Teams Lay Down Heavy Barrage of Scoring With Blue and White Quint Reaching Peak Form After Passing Half Way Post.

BELLAIRE, Feb. 5.—For the second time this season, Bellaire high basketeers succumbed before the smooth-working East Liverpool high five when they dropped a 43-41 contest on the new Bellaire floor last night. Field goals were hooped with machine gun rapidity and when the smoke cleared the Red and Black found themselves holding the short end.

In valley circles Bellaire is undefeated, the Red and Blacks' only two losses having been inflicted by last night's invades. Several weeks ago East Liverpool took the measure of Coach Lewis' men at East Liverpool by a 42 to 31 score, and the game last night was advertised as a revenge performance with the word "scoring," however, having been substituted for "revenge," without any formal notice of such a last-minute change in the program.

Fans who packed the Bellaire auditorium were treated to a hectic struggle, in which players on both teams ran themselves dizzy popping goals and scorers sustained numb fingers in counting them up. A total of 32 field goals were swished through the basket, 16 by each team.

East Liverpool came out on top through superior ability at the gift line. The winners converted 11 out of 18 while the Lewismen did no better than 9 out of 21 attempts.

The invaders hopped out at a 16 to 5 lead in the first quarter. Kreiter, Bellaire ace, came to life in the second period and, aided considerably by Raiston, staged a stampede that put the Red and Black in the lead at half time, 21 to 18.

What happened in the East Liverpool dressing rooms during the intermission may forever remain a mystery, but the fact stands that the visitors tallied 15 points to Bellaire's two in the third quarter and assumed a healthy 33 to 26 lead. The charm passed in the last period and Bellaire outscored the winners 18 to 10 but the spurt accomplished little more than closing a big gap and adding excitement to a game already heavily laden with excitement.

Kreiter, with 8 field goals and 5 out of 8 fouls, was high scorer for the evening. Hamilton, for East Liverpool, tossed 6 two-pointers and made 5 out of 6 fouls, while McKeever, also a visitor, looped 5 goals and one foul. Ralston tallied 4 field goals for Bellaire, and Larkins tacked on 3 field goals and 3 fouls out of as many attempts for East Liverpool.

ANOTHER COACH AT NORTHWESTERN

EVANSTON, Ill., Feb. 5. — James Phelan, head football coach at Purdue university, is the latest gridiron mentor selected by Dame Rumor to succeed Glen Thistlethwaite, at Northwestern university.

Phelan's presence here, admittedly to confer with K. L. Wilson, Northwestern's director of athletics, has set the gossip pot to boiling as it boiled before over Dr. Spears of Minnesota and others.

Wilson said he had not talked to Phelan, but would be glad to do so. The Purdue mentor is said to be considering a similar job at the University of Texas. He plans to leave for Austin in a day or two. Phelan is reported to have confided that he is not exactly satisfied in his present position at Purdue.

INSIDE Ggolf

By CHESTER HORTON

Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans.

It should be obvious that for the pitched ball that is to stop when it strikes the ground the clubhead should go well under the ball as it strikes, because no topped or half-topped ball will ever stop. To get this effect it is not necessary to make the clubhead dig into the turf. Instead, just let your arms go out freely toward the ball in the forward swing, the head meantime holding still. The reason so many golfers lean forward while hitting is because they do not let the arms reach out toward the ball. There should be a distinct feeling that you are throwing both your hands directly at the ball and yet there should be not the slightest inclination to throw the body that way—just the arms and hands. You can merely stand still without a club, and throw your arms that way. This produces the whip-cracking effect we talk about, but if you throw the body, or lean forward and push with the body, all this arm-throwing effect is lost.

ROSENBERG WINS SCRAP BUT LOSES TITLE

CHESTER LICKS GENEVA FROSH ON PARK COURT

Field Goal by Miller in Last Second Wins Contest.

COACH RAY WILDE'S faith in his Chester high school basketball squad was vindicated last night when the Hancock countians, defeated early in the season by the Geneva college Freshmen, took the measure of the Pennsylvanians, 24-23, in the fastest cage exhibition of the season on the Rock Springs park court, Miller tossing in the winning field goal as the timer fired that shot that ended the contest.

Wilde's youngsters employed a short passing system designed to push the ball up under the basket for short range shots while the visitors took plenty of chances from mid-floor. Both threw up strong five-man defense formations.

The game, from a scoring standpoint, developed chiefly into a duel between Simcox, of Chester, and Luke, of Geneva, and when the smoke had cleared away Wilde's star emerged with a two-point lead over his rival although field goal honors were even, each sinking seven double deckers. Simcox, however, registered three free line attempts, making his total 17 points, over three-fourths of his team's total scoring.

Luke contributed some of the most spectacular shooting of the year on the Chester court, six of his seven field goals being engineered from the middle of the floor.

Wilde's youngsters played rings around the visitors in the first and second periods but Geneva came back in the concluding half and made things hot for the home crew. Chester's marksmanship was less effective in the third and fourth periods.

Chester had accumulated a six-point lead in the first half fighting but this began to melt away as Luke found the hoop for repeated field goals after the third period had gotten well under way.

The Genevans, as a result of their efforts in the third quarter, held the big end of a 21-20 count when the final canto was launched. Center Dinney boosted it two more points on a nice shot from mid-floor. Simcox kept Chester in the running with a toss from center. With a few minutes of play remaining both teams began to take long chances. As the second hand of the timer's clock reached the zero hour, Miller looped one in for a field goal and the point that made the verdict satisfactory to the jury of several hundred Chesterites who saw the contest.

In the preliminary game the Chester girls defeated the East Liverpool M. P. church sextet by a score of 36 to 15. The Chester lassies led, 29 to 4, at the half. The visitors improved in the second half and outscored the home girls in the last two periods but their efforts were insufficient to cut down the big lead amassed in the first two paragraphs.

JOE HARRIS GOES TO PITTSBURGH

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5—Joe (Moon) Harris, who starred in the world's series of 1924 and 1925 with Washington Senators, has been sold to the Pittsburgh Pirates, it was announced here today. Harris worked at first base and in the outfield for the Nats.

The addition of Tris Speaker as a regular outfielder and manager Harris' desire to develop Bob McCann, a recruit from Columbus, as an understudy first sacker, made Harris surplus on the Senators' roster.

KLINCK'S QUINT COPS CONTEST AT CARROLLTON

Foul Shot by Guard Buckley Gives Wellsville Victory.

ALTHOUGH hampered to a considerable extent by the small caged floor, Coach Klinck's Wellsville high school five last night defeated Carrollton, at Carrollton, by a count of 19 to 18, Guard Buckley tossing in the point that put the game on the right side of the ledger for the Orange and Black.

The visitors were out in front all the way, but the margin was no more than four points at any stage of the game, and in the final few minutes dwindled away to nothing at all.

Klinck's crew tossed a foul for the only point made by either team in the opening period, the tally standing 1 to 0 at the first intermission.

In the second quarter, Calhoun and his mates rann up nine points and the Carrollton five also broke the ice-collecting an even half dozen points before the half closed.

Five more points were attached to the scoring in the third period, Wellsville retaining the lead, 12 to 9.

Klinck's proteges then boosted their count to 18 before the home lads got started in the final quarter, but here they struck a snag and Carrollton began to climb. With 40 seconds of play remaining, Carrollton dropped in two field goals, changing the score from 18 to 14 to 18-all.

Then Guard Buckley came to the rescue with a foul attempt which he made good for the deciding point.

Both East Palestine teams will be in action tonight on the Wellsville court, the girls' preliminary starting at 7:30.

PURSE IS HELD UP BY STATE RING RULERS

Scales 4½ Pounds Overweight for Bout With Graham.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Charley Phil Rosenberg, fistiana's favorite bad boy today was sans title, money, credibality and, in fact, everything except the right to breathe, in consequence of a wholly synthetic bantamweight championship bout with Bushey Graham at Madison Square Garden last night. True, Rosenberg took the decision by a large majority at the end of fifteen rounds but that was ordained when he stepped on the scales 4½ pounds overweight in the afternoon.

By gong time, Rosenberg looked the part of a reasonably promising featherweight. Graham, meantime, remained a reasonably promising bantamweight and never the twain should meet. But they did, probably for the sake of getting something out of the way. One is justified in suspecting that the something in question was and is Charley Phil Rosenberg.

For things began to happen to Charles Philip with great and unpleasant rapidity as soon as he stepped from the scales. First off, his bantamweight title was declared vacated, leaving last night's affair the status of a championship only in the event that Graham won. It would appear to have been a bad break for Charles Philip that Graham didn't.

Hold on Purse.

The clarion tones of the official verdict still were echoing through the garden when our irate boxing commission, having shorn the young man of his title, rose up as one man to declare his wage in escrew, which is a monogramed way of saying that he didn't get it.

Next, with one mighty sweep of the official arm, they declared Charley Phil Rosenberg suspended indefinitely.

The boy friend thus is ruled off the turf in all states where the art of legalized boxing is plied, the National Boxing association having barred him for life. Just how long that will be may depend on the supply and demand in the ribbon counter profession. Even a bantamweight must eat.

It is the general impression that Rosenberg got a title out of practice in the gustatory line during his efforts to train off something that nature insisted on preserving. In fact, it was only during the last two days, when Rosenberg realized that his fight against weight was a losing one, that he regained some degree of his old familiarity with a knife and fork. He weighed 121 pounds for the commission's deputies on Wednesday but 122½ pounds for the commission's scales yesterday afternoon and it was this evasion of ethics that promoted much of the commissioners' ire. They apparently felt that he should have hewed to the sping, let the pounds fall where they might.

Attempt to Influence Odds.

The thing was looked upon as a bold attempt to influence the betting odds for a clean up, and was so hailed in some quarters, but if such was the project, it failed from first to last.

The high cost of living has hit the elephant market, and prices of the huge beasts have risen to $3,000 a ton, f. o. b., Europe, says the announcement made recently by a famous dealer in wild animals.

MEN AND BOYS HEAR SERMON BY DR. KNAPP

Some Church Members Like Tombstones, Says Evangelist.

HITS VIEWPOINT

Special Services at Methodist Protestant Church.

"Some church members remind me of tombstones without inscriptions" affirmed Dr. W. A. Knapp at the Methodist Protestant revival last evening. "They have lost their spirituality. They do not feel God and are given to formality of religion in this age of superficiality. Were they to have the right viewpoint of the Almighty it would be an easy matter to lead men and women to Christ."

Men, accompanied by numerous boys thronged the center aisle of the auditorium. The honor for bringing the greatest number of lads to the service went to Mont Clutter, a Sunday school teacher, who escorted 18 to the meeting. He was, as per promise, given a useful gift, a Biblical expository for weekly Bible lessons.

Announcement was made that an augmented choir of boys and girls would assist at tonight's service following a week of preparation.

A Christian Endeavor rally at 6:30 o'clock on Sunday evening, at which Endeavors all over the city and those not members will be present, will be held in the Sunday school room. Dr. Knapp, discussing special subjects, will preach twice on Sunday, at 11 a. m., and 7:30 o'clock.

The Sunday school attendance quota for tomorrow's Bible study has been set at 403 with indications of its being reached.

The invocation last evening was made by Rev. John F. Dimit, pastor of the church. Mrs. Vinaroff gave a solo on the miramba.

Preceding the sermon and following the singing of "The Ninety and Nine," Dr. Knapp told how a hardened sinner of 75 years became converted in a Nebraska revival by hearing this song sung which he had once heard as a boy in Ohio. The song proved the entering wedge. "He came to see me at the depot as I was leaving town," said the evangelist. "I told him to remain faithful a few days longer and he would be certain of reaching the celestial heights. And as I heard afterwards he passed away the following Thursday uttering as his final words the text I had used when he accepted Christ: 'Thanks be to God for His unspeakable gift.'

During the remainder of the meeting babies will be provided places in a basement when they become unruly so their mothers can continue in the services.

"We live in a day when men and women think little of religion," averred Dr. Knapp. "And yet there is no fact more established than immortality. There is nothing destroyed, only changed, in this life. So if this is true of matter, it is unthinkable that the soul shall cease living. Even though there were no future the good life is the better here and now. And thus it pays to be a Christian either way."

Dr. Knapp's text was the injunction, "Be not deceived, God is not mocked. Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

Our druggist also recommends it highly." Ask for it.

MISSING WOMAN BEING SOUGHT

County Authorities Join Search for Brooke County Resident.

A search for Mrs. Ota Dare, 47, of Beech Bottom, who has been missing since early Thursday morning, has been extended throughout the tri-state district. The Ohio river in the vicinity of Beech Bottom was dragged yesterday on the assumption that the woman, who was last seen near the water, might have fallen in the river and been drowned.

Mrs. Dare was last seen at 9:30 o'clock Thursday morning walking toward the river from her home, county officials were informed last night. A search was instituted for her Thursday afternoon and was continued throughout the night and all day yesterday without result.

Mrs. Dare, it was said, has not been well for some time, and only recently returned from a trip to California where she had gone in the interest of her health. It is feared by her husband that she may have left home temporarily deranged because of her ailment and may have fallen into the river or have wandered a considerable distance away. Because of this he caused to be spread broadcast the news of her disappearance.

Mrs. Dare was described as being 5 feet 6 inches in height, slim, with dark hair and brown eyes, wearing a black hat and coat and a black and white dress. All her clothing was marked with her name, it was said.

WELLSBURG MAN SENT TO JAIL

Robert Gill, of Wellsburg, charged with beating a board bill and breaking and entering, was arraigned yesterday before Justice A. G. Allison. He was fined $90 or given the alternative of spending 90 days in the county jail to which place he was taken by Chief of Police William Smith.

Gill, it was testified at the hearing, accompanied by another man came here two weeks ago and on the plea that he had secured employment in a local plant was given room and lodging. Both men left the city Monday after they had broken into their rooming house and secured their clothing. Gill was arrested at Wellsburg on a warrant issued here.

TEETH IN RELATION TO HEALTH

PERMANENT TEETH

(Editor's note—The following is the second of a series of articles on various phases of dentistry, prepared by a representative of the East Liverpool-Wellsville Dental society. Future articles will appear in Saturday editions.)

The permanent, or second teeth, are 32 in number, including the third molars, (wisdom teeth),—16 above and 16 below. The first permanent teeth to appear through the gums (erupt) are the four first molars,—one above on each side and one below on each side. These teeth erupt back of all the deciduous teeth, or "baby teeth" as they are usually called, and also before any of the deciduous teeth are normally lost, usually appearing at the age of six or seven years.

The permanent teeth commence to take their respective places in the dental arch at the age of six years and evidently they were intended to last until death, at least, but, Oh how often they are prematurely lost. The question may be reasonably asked, Why are they so frequently lost too soon? Well, it may sometimes be the fault of a careless or commercially inclined dentist, but more often it is because of neglect on the part of the owner of those teeth. It is generally presumed that it is not a common practice to wash the teeth as often as we do our hands, and yet it is altogether possible to find more kinds of disease germs on the teeth of the average person than on their hands, remembering all the time that nature made provisions for reproducing the tissues of the hands, but not so that of the teeth. Of course, we do not know just why nature supplied us with two sets of perfectly good teeth, but we do know that it is usually pretty good practice to take rather good care of whatever nature does give us. Therefore, isn't it reasonably good logic to take good care of those teeth?

We are told that, through cell reproduction, the various tissues of the body are replaced once every seven years, but it is a well-known fact that the teeth are the only exception to this law of nature, because the teeth are replaced once, and only once, for all time, naturally, and it is very generally conceded by all competent investigators that the loss of all the permanent teeth materially shortens the life of that respective individual in relation to what it would be if they had good natural teeth, even though they may have servicable substitutes. To be sure, no plea whatever is herein intended for the retention in the mouth of diseased or defective tooth conditions which are not only a menace to, but, most certainly, a preventive of good health. The idea intended to be stressed here is that we should be very careful to keep our teeth clean and free from all defects, thereby not only preventing pain, but will preserve them for the purposes manifestly intended by nature.

MAN ARRESTED ON OLD CHARGE

Seven years ago Metar Turodevich, of Weirton, and Mike Meyers, of Weirton, engaged in a fight at a camp near Holliday's Cove. Yesterday a warrant, charging Turodevich with cutting with intent to kill was served. He is awaiting arraignment at the Weirton jail.

The accused man, jailed by Weirton city police and Hancock county officers is said to have been employed at the Folio camp, along with Meyers. An argument which arose in the course of the day's work ended in a fight in which Turodevich is alleged to have drawn a knife and severely wounded Meyers with the weapon. The alleged assailant fled. Meyers lay at a hospital for weeks as a result, it is said, the wound proving all but fatal.

Turodevich is said to have made his home in another state since that time, returning to Weirton Thursday where he was recognized with the result the old charge was rested against him and he was jailed.

What's What in Washington

BY CHARLES R STEWART

FARM RELIEF BEGINS AT HOME, SAYS EXPERT, EXPLAINING HOW

By Charles P. Stewart.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—"Farm relief begins at home," observed Roger I. Sherman, food expert, who has had a good deal to say concerning much of the proposed agricultural legislation congress has been mulling over in recent weeks.

ROGER I SHERMAN

Sherman has been in the canning and packing business for years. He was a side kick of Uncle Joe Cannon. He put Porto Rican fruit raising on a paying basis by teaching the islanders how to utilize their previous waste products. Territorial Delegate Sutherland consults him as to the market's possibilities for the Alaskan salmon catch. He went to France to show the United States commissariat how to make the soldiers' grub taste good. He advises with Secretary of Agriculture Pardine. He's mentioned as the United States' first minister to Canada, because of the reputation he has for creating an American demand for Canadian blueberries. He stirred up a sugar scandal.

If there's anything edible, he has a finger in it.

He's here, there and everywhere and he spends considerable time in Washington.

"The farmer who produces an extra-super quality of anything never has any surplus," continued Sherman.

"If he sorted out his best stuff, he'd sell it all at top prices. But he can't resist the temptation to mix in his inferior grades, so's to get fancy figures for the whole thing. It doesn't work out that way. Instead of getting high prices for everything, because it's a partly superior quality, he gets low prices for everything because it's partly inferior quality.

"The first lesson in farm co-operation is:

"There's no limit to the demand for the best. Keep the poorer part of the yield separate and sell it as second grade. It won't bring so much. That can't be expected. But the high price for the first grade will ofset the lower price for the poorer grade.

"That's the way to take care of the surplus they holler so much about."

The farmer's got to have credit," agreed Sherman. "He mustn't be forced to unload at the worst time.

"He ought to be able to borrow his crop's full value when he harvests it. Then his bank can't afford to have him sold out at slump prices, for the benefit of speculators, who mean to hang on for the next rise. On that basis, the farmer doesn't have to sell until he gets ready, anyway.

"If the farmer's bank won't do this for him, the government ought to.

"Brainy farming, community warehouses and credit, I tell you—that's agricultural co-operation."

"I don't forget the consumer," added the food man.

"He's entitled to carload rates.

"The big dealer gets his stuff by the carload. The little one gets small jags. Of course they cost him more.

"What does the big chap do? He buys good goods, but not quite A-1 Then he puts on his own labels and sells slightly inferior stuff as first quality, saying he can cut prices because he buys in quantity. But really he pockets the rake-off from his carload freight rates.

"The little guy has to buy top grade stuff for the sake of top grade labels and his freight costs him more. Naturally, he's undersold by the big one.

"The consumers' stuck either way. He doesn't get the goods he thinks he's buying, or he does get 'em, but they cost him too much.

"The little dealers' game is to co-operate, too—get together, order in carload lots and have a truck to receive their carload at the railroad station and distribute it among 'em."

"That," concluded Sherman, "is co-operation, from producer to consumer, but you'll never get the middle men to agree on it."
